BIG REWARD SPURS KIDNAP-MURDERER HUNT

Thirteen Hurt In Plane Crash

Martin Johnson and Wife and Others In California Accident

First Man Carried Out of Tehachapi Foothills Says Nine Other Passengers and Crew of Three Hurt, But None Killed; Plane Wrecked When Bound From Salt Lake City to Los Angeles

Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 12.—An air transport with thirteen persons aboard—including Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, the famous explorers—crashed in the Tehachapi foothills today, but the first survivor brought out said he did not believe anyone was killed.

Searching parties from the Olive View Sanitarium, a large Los Angeles County institution, found the wreckage.

The first man brought down from the hills, Arthur Robinson, was badly bruised and shaken, but his condition was not serious.

ALL INJURED

He told Arthur J. Will, superintendent of the sanitarium, that all of the occupants of the big transport were injured—some were unconscious—but he added: "I don't think any are dead."

Those aboard were ten passengers, and three of a crew—a pilot, co-pilot and stewardess.

The point of the crash was about ten miles from the air terminal, and half way between Newhall, where the plane made its last radio report, and the terminal.

The plane was bound to Los Angeles from Salt Lake City.

The machine was due at the Union Air Terminal 10.45 a.m. The pilot was W. W. Tevis, co-pilot named Owens, and the stewardess, Esther Conner.

PASSENGER LIST

The passengers, in addition to the Johnsons, were: D. E. Spencer, H. Hules, T. Tillinghast, J. Braben, S. Robinsop, A. L. Loomis, Miss L. James and R. T. Anderson.

PARTY SPEEDS BY CAR

Western Air officials, with a ground crew, left by automobile from the Union Air Terminal immediately for the Newhall region.

John Wood, rancher, living four miles east of Newhall, drove into the sheriff's substation at Newhall shortly before noon to report that he had heard an "airplane engine sputter and finally die" near his ranch at 11.15 o'clock this morning.

Jack Bernard, Pasadena amateur radio operator, informed the sheriff's office that he believed he had heard, on a shortwave radio length, the words:

"We are going down in a crash."

The radio then became silent, he said.

The airline said no such radio message had been received. The last message from the transport at 11.05 a.m., was:

"Coming down to localizer at field."

This was in reference to picking up the directional radio beam of the field, preparatory to landing.

The Newhall rancher, who did not have a telephone at his place, feared an air disaster and went as quickly as he could to the sheriff's substation. Two sheriff's deputies returned to his ranch with him to investigate.

The sky at Newhall was overcast after intermittent showers that began during the night.

Some of the hills near Newhall have snow on their summits. Many of the trails have been washed out by the winter storms.

The terrain is rugged, sprinkled with trees and thick brush.

Martin Johnson, born in Rockport, Illinois, October 9, 1884, has traveled around the world six times. He spent twelve years in the islands of the South Seas. He was in Australia one year, in Borneo two years and in Africa for five years. Mrs. Johnson, missing with him today, was formerly Osa Helen Leighty of Chanute, Kansas. They were married in 1910 and she has shared every expedition with him.

Johnson helped build the Snark, Jack London's cruising sailing yacht, and he was the only member of the party to complete the trip in 1917.

He has taken many motion pictures of wild animal life and has written many books about the subject. Much of his work has been done for the American Museum of Natural History.

Troops Sent To Strike Area

Associated Press

Detroit, Jan. 12.—Governor Frank Murphy ordered more than a thousand members of Michigan's National Guard to concentrate at Flint today to preserve order after riots had injured more than a score of police and strikers who engaged in a street battle near a General Motors Corporation plant.

The troops, who were issued full field equipment, including rolling kitchens, mobilized at nine western Michigan cities.

At Lansing, the Governor said he had received a promise from General Motors officials that neither heat nor food would be denied the "sit-down" strikers holding possession of the Fisher body plant at Flint, outside of which last night's violence broke out.

Union men said that attempts to prevent passage of food to the strikers inside the Flint plant preceded last night's rioting.

New Treaty On St. Lawrence

Associated Press

Washington, Jan. 12. — Belief that President Roosevelt would send a new St. Lawrence waterway treaty to the United States Senate was stimulated today with convening of a White House conference of State Department and power officials.

The first treaty with Canada providing for construction of a seaway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic, via the St. Lawrence, was rejected two years ago.

MILDER SPELL IS ONLY BRIEF

Weather Expected to Turn Cold Again Tomorrow, After Westerly Winds

Westerly wind may bring a brief mild spell to Victoria overnight but the weather will probably turn colder again tomorrow, it was indicated in this morning's report from the Meteorological Observatory on Gonzales Hill.

The minimum temperature this morning was twenty-nine degrees—three degrees of frost. At noon the thermometer had risen to thirty-four degrees—two degrees above freezing.

The sky remained overcast and there seemed prospects of light snow or some sleet-like rain.

Meanwhile skaters are enjoying good sport. The shallow ponds on the outskirts of the city remain crowded with skaters.

Goodacre Lake, in Beacon Hill Park, was flooded overnight and this morning there was an excellent sheet of ice for the hundreds of people who flock there daily. This afternoon the ice was scraped, to make it in first-class shape for this evening.

Dozens of children crowded the ice at Beacon Hill yesterday afternoon. That some of them had no skates made little difference to their enjoyment of the ice. They slid about and played tag and piled into snow piles and altogther generally enjoyed winter's fun.

Sir John Aird Quits Bank Post

Retires as Commerce President; S. H. Logan Will Be New Head

Canadian Press

Toronto, Jan. 12.—Sir John Aird, dean of Canadian banking, today announced his retirement from the presidency of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. He will be succeeded by S. H. Logan, general manager since 1926.

A. E. Arscott succeeds Mr. Logan as general manager and S. M. Wedd and James Stewart are appointed assistant general managers.

A stenographer when he entered the service of the bank in 1878, Sir John developed the greater part of the bank's branch system on the western prairies and was appointed president in 1926. He had been knighted in 1917 in recognition of services to the Dominion and Imperial Governments in connection with war-time financing.

Sir John Aird was born in Longueuil, Que., of Scottish parents. He entered business life as a telegrapher in the Northern Railway at Toronto and held responsible bank positions at Toronto and Seaforth before being made manager at Winnipeg.

As superintendent of western branches he was largely responsible for development of the bank's branch system in the west. He was appointed general manager in 1915.

Sir John has always maintained a great interest in sports. He was famous as a lacross player in the '80s and '90s.

NEW PRESIDENT

Mr. Logan, new president of the bank, started his career with the Halifax Banking Company in 1897. In 1905 he opened the first Cobalt, Ont., branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce with a tent as his office. He developed the branch system in the northern Ontario mining field.

Franco-German Tension Over Morocco Eases

French General Inspects Spanish Zone and Finds No Indications of Large Reich Troop Concentrations; France and Hitler Reported Moving Toward Full Accord on All Difficulties

Associated Press

Paris, Jan. 12.—A military inspection of Spanish Morocco set rest French fears of German troop concentrations today amid indications of coming negotiations for a "full and lasting settlement" of Franco-German problems.

Resident-General August Nogues of French Morocco informed the Foreign Office that Gen. G. H. Berenger, one of his aides, had inspected the Spanish zone and reported he could find no evidence of large numbers of German troops.

The Quai d'Orsay said J. Beigbeder y Atienza, the insurgent high commissioner in Spanish Morocco, had granted permission for the tour of inspection to the French military officers at Tangier.

The authorization followed French protests charging illegal penetration of German troops and commercial advisers in the Spanish zone. France had demanded guarantees no German troops would be allowed to land in the territory and no foreign fortifications built.

WIDE ACCORD

In this sudden breaking of the acute tension which had bound Europe since before the Christmas holidays, France and Germany were reported today to be negotiating a

U.S. Federal Offer Is $10,000 For Arrest of Slayer of Mattson Boy

Police Urged On By President

All Means Used to Capture Mattson Murderer, Says Roosevelt

Associated Press

Washington, D.C., Jan. 12.—President Roosevelt declared today the murder of ten-year-old Charles Mattson in Washington State has "shocked the nation," and added every means at the command of the United States government must be enlisted to capture the perpetrator of "this ghastly crime."

REWARD SET AT $10,000

Simultaneously, Attorney-General Cummings offered a $10,000 reward for arrest of the kidnapper of the boy.

In an official statement, the President said the Justice Department was engaged in a search which "will not be terminated until the murderer is caught."

Stephen T. Early, a White House secretary, telling of the chief executive's reaction to first news of discovery of the boy's body, said that in effect Mr. Roosevelt had directed Cummings to "go get them."

CO-OPERATION ASKED

The text of the President's statement follows:

"The murder of the little Mattson boy has shocked the nation. Every means at our command must be enlisted to capture and punish the perpetrator of this ghastly crime.

"Attorney-General Cummings informs me he has offered a reward for information leading to the arrest of the criminal, and that the special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice are engaged in a search which will be pursued relentlessly, and will not be terminated until the murderer is caught.

"I bespeak for the agents of the Department of Justice the continued and wholehearted co-operation of the local police and all our law enforcement agents in this necessary work.

"A crime of this kind is renewed evidence of the need of sustained effort in dealing with the criminal menace."

To Eliminate Bad Curve on Malahat

Elimination of one of the worst corners on the Malahat Highway, a sharp bend going round a steep rock bluff about one-quarter of a mile south of Cousin's store at the Shawnigan cut-off has been arranged by the Department of Public Works in connection with the work now in progress on the road.

Hon. F. M. MacPherson, the minister, announced the plan today after an inspection of the job recently.

The original scheme for improvement of the highway at this point was to widen the existing roadway and generally lessen the curve. Through a new alignment worked out by surveyors the whole corner will be cut off, the minister explained.

The corner is now one of the worst on the highway between Godstream and Mill Bay. The road itself is narrow and special traffic signs for a fifteen-mile speed limit have been required there as safety measures.

Boy's Garments Found in Abandoned Auto at Everett, Wash., Service Station Were Worn by Little Charles While Captive, Says Report as G-men and Police Comb That District and Other Areas Bordering Puget Sound; Funeral of Boy Slain by Bandit Will Be Held Tomorrow

Associated Press

Tacoma, Jan. 12.—A pile of boy's garments was reported found in an automobile abandoned at an Everett service station about the time squads of officers hurried there today in the renewed search for the kidnap-killer of ten-year-old Charles Mattson.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, state patrolmen and local officers closed in on the Everett area, all of them carrying the direct mandate of President Franklin D. Roosevelt to capture the slayer without fail.

The President's call came at the same time as an announcement from Attorney-General Cummings at Washington that the Department of Justice was offering a reward of $10,000 for information leading to the arrest of the murderer.

While the hunt progressed, Lieut.-enant-Governor Victor Meyers, announced in Olympia a bill would probably be introduced in the Washington State Senate today to offer a $5,000 reward for information leading to the kidnapper's arrest. One group of newspapers has already offered $1,000 for such exclusive information.

The federal agents and police moved on the Everett and other areas while members of the slain boy's family sorrowfully prepared to bid him farewell at private funeral services in a Tacoma mortuary tomorrow at 1 p.m. The body of Charles was found in a clump of brush seven miles south of Everett yesterday, after a fifteen-day search.

OFFICIAL QUOTED

Finding of the boy's clothing at the Everett service station was reported by The Seattle Times, quoting an unnamed official. The newspaper said federal agents had impounded the automobile and the garments, reported to be those Charles Mattson was wearing when he was kidnapped from his Tacoma home December 27.

DRIVER FLED

The driver of the automobile, the newspaper asserted, stopped at the service station for gasoline, then fled suddenly, leaving the automobile behind. The station attendant saw the clothing and called officers. The Times said the garments bore no bloodstains.

Sheriff Walter Faulkner of Everett, declared, "I don't know anything about it. I really don't."

Harold Nathan, chief of the agents operating here, remained in his office, along with J. H. Connelly, his chief assistant.

WIDE AREA SEARCHED

Before noon today, the forces of federal, state and local officers were spread over a wide area. Near Everett, where the boy's body was found, a large force of men patrolled through the scrub land and adjacent small farms. At least three automobile loads of federal agents were included in the search party, along with state patrolmen and sheriff's deputies.

DEATH PENALTY

Meanwhile, Coroner T. H. Long of Pierce County (Tacoma) and Stowell Challacombe of Snohomish County (Everett) announced they planned no inquest on the boy's death. Their action indicated the kidnapper, if he is captured, will be tried under either the state or federal kidnapping statutes rather than on a murder charge. Either of the abduction laws would allow prosecutors to seek a death penalty.

AUTOS TRACED

Near Everett, state patrolmen said they were investigating two mysterious automobiles seen in the area Sunday night, when the boy's body was believed to have been dumped at its last hiding place. Coroner's reports indicated Charles was slain about last Friday, the body allowed to freeze in some exposed spot, then carried to the clump of brush, some seven miles south of Everett, and dumped there some twelve or eighteen hours before it was discovered.

One of the automobiles was left in a garage at Marysville by a middle-aged man who failed to return for it. A boy's cap was found on a rear seat.

Tire tracks of another machine seen near at a shack about three miles from where the body was found were also being compared with those near the body.

Local officers at Tacoma, Olympia, Everett, Seattle and other Washington cities also were known to be following clues they have previously si-

Blame Maniac For Kidnapping

Abductor Convicts at Alcatraz See Indications of Insanity in Mattson Tacoma Murder

Associated Press

San Francisco, Jan. 12. — In the opinion of kidnappers at the Alcatraz federal prison here, as reported by a convict just released, the "snatcher" of Charles Mattson of Tacoma was insane.

"They believe that, though they don't know all the details of the case," said Albert Best, alias "Dr." Albert Stanley Fortune.

Best, who was taken into custody by San Francisco police on theft and cheque charges immediately after his release from the island prison in San Francisco Bay, said federal agents had questioned the Alcatraz kidnappers about the Mattson case.

The kidnappers on the "rock" include Harmon W. Waley, serving forty-five years for the "snatching" of George Weyerhaeuser, another Tacoma boy, nearly two years ago.

"Waley and the rest of the snatchers over there," Best said, "believe this new kidnapping was the work of a nut, or fanatic. They think the $28,000 he demanded was a nutty figure. They would have asked $30,000, $50,000 or some round amount, not twenty-eight grand."

Best, who was transferred from Columbus, Ohio, to complete an automobile theft sentence on the island, said kidnappers at Alcatraz are treated just like other inmates—"all just alike."

Tacoma, Jan. 12.—Feeling against the man who slew ten-year-old Charles Mattson ran strong in Tacoma and was echoed in legislative corridors in the state capital at Olympia. In pool rooms, restaurants and hotel lobbies, among hardened persons and more cultured, the bitter wish was expressed the killer would be found and a short-cut taken to place him on the gallows.

At Seattle, Otto Mittelstadt, King County coroner, reported evidence the boy had been bound and roughly treated before he was killed.

Permit Out For $45,000 Apartment

A permit for $45,000 for the erection of an apartment house building at the southeast corner of Douglas and Courtenay Streets was issued at the City Hall this morning.

The permit was issued to C. M. Forrest, Vancouver. The architect is W. F. Gardiner, Vancouver.

While all contracts for the building have not yet been let, it was learned that Luney Brothers will have charge of the brick work.

The building will be two stories high and will contain twenty-seven suites—thirteen on each floor and a janitor's room in the basement. It will be heated by an automatic oil system.

Construction work will get under way immediately as soon as a small office now located on the property is taken down. This work was started today.

POPE SUFFERS SINKING SPELL

Pontiff Revived With Stimulants After Making Too Great Demand on Strength During Talks

Associated Press

Vatican City, Jan. 12.—Pope Pius suffered another sinking spell today after disregarding doctors' warnings not to receive visitors. He was revived with stimulants.

Shortly before, medical attendants had expressed fear of new complications in the Pontiff's right leg where a varicose condition, similar to that in the left leg, was developing.

Some doctors even warned veins might burst in the affected limb as they did in the left leg, resulting in open sores and dangers of infection.

This morning the Pope was reported by persons close to him as apparently conscious of his approaching end. It was said the Pontiff had told a cardinal who wanted to delay an important conference uring the week-end:

"I must do my entire duty while the Master concedes me energy; my successor must not find things undone."

BIG REWARD SPURS KIDNAP-MURDERER HUNT

SEEKING SEDAN

Seattle police broadcast an order to officers to watch for a 1936 model blue Nash sedan, which they said was to be investigated in connection with the case. Officers were warned to use extreme caution in stopping the machine as the driver was believed to be armed.

The automobile was stolen some time ago from John Long of Lilliwaup and was last seen on the Everett-Seattle highway Wednesday, January 6. It carried a 1936 Washington license, A-54-515, the report said.

USING ALL RESOURCES

Prior to President Roosevelt's statement today, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the federal agents, had issued a statement at Chicago asserting the bureau would "use all the resources at our command to apprehend and bring to justice the kidnapper and slayer of the Mattson boy."

Mr. Hoover would not say whether he would come to Tacoma to direct the search personally.

Nathan last night told a press conference the $28,000 ransom demanded for release of Charles had not been paid, though Dr. Mattson had made repeated attempts to do so.

Demand for the death penalty should the kidnapper be captured and be brought to trial in federal court here was a foregone conclusion. Prosecutor Harry Johnston of Pierce County, announced some time ago he would seek the death penalty should the trial be held in a state court.

Paul Sceva, a close friend of the family, spoke for Dr. Mattson in revealing many details of the fruitless fifteen-day effort to rescue Charles from his captor. In addition to the ransom note left on the floor of the Mattson home, Dr. Mattson was in contact with the abductor three times, Sceva said. Some of these by letters and by telephone, but none of the messages gave the frantic physician any assurance about his son's fate.

WAS INCOHERENT

The final contact, it was learned, was by telephone call from Seattle Sunday, January 3. In each message, Sceva said, the kidnapper was incoherent and failed to make definite arrangements with the family though assured the $28,000 ransom was ready for him.

Sceva quoted Dr. Mattson as saying he had made every effort humanly possible "to pay the ransom and gain the return of my son."

Sceva said no effort had been made to trace the letters or calls for fear of endangering the safety of Charles.

"The kidnapper has acted like a trout coming out of his lair, almost taking the bait, and crawling back into it again," said Sceva.

SUSPECTS PICKED UP

While the federal bureau investigation men scrutinized evidence they had gathered at the autopsy and at Everett, the police broadcast pick-up orders for suspected fugitives and paroled inmates of insane asylums and for sadists.

Evidence disclosed by Coroner Otto H. Mittelstadt of Seattle, who examined the body before its return, revived the theory a maniac or degenerate may have committed the crime.

Lieut.-Col. Gus G. Appelman of Tacoma, a close family friend and the man who broke the word to Mrs. Mattson, had charge of funeral arrangements. He said the funeral would be private, and would be held as soon as authorities finished examining the body and the family could stand the ordeal.

"The family will stay inside the home until after Charles's funeral," Paul Sceva said. "After that they may go away to get away from all this."

A farm boy, rabbit hunting in a section of "cut-over-land" near chicken ranches, seven miles south of Everett, came on the body shortly before noon yesterday. It lay in a slight depression, sprawled face up on the snow.

A large hole in the head was apparently the cause of death, though rope marks on the wrists, bruises and numerous abrasions indicated the child had been mistreated before being slain. Coroner Challacombe and others agreed Charles had been slain several days ago, probably last Friday, and the body was left in a water-filled ditch until it froze, then carried to the clump of brush.

BODY EXAMINED

In a guarded mortuary United States government agents and physicians examined and re-examined the battered remains of the victim.

Paul Sceva said "Charles has been dead a long time, probably between three days and a week"—long before Dr. Mattson's last frantic efforts to pay the ransom. Blood on the body was frozen, indicating the boy was dead before he was dragged there.

From their careful autopsy officers hoped to find clues leading to the swarthy beared man who broke into the Mattsons' living-room on the evening of December 27, while the toys Charles had received still were under the Christmas tree.

The Mattson family, grief-stricken by the horrible ending of the abduction, hid within their English-style home and refused to see anyone but intimate friends.

The ransom definitely was not paid, although Dr. Mattson made many attempts to pay it. "The kidnapper was too yellow to come out of his hiding to obtain the money," said Paul Sceva today.

CLAY AS CLUE

Although the results of the autopsy were not announced, Coroner Otto H. Middelstadt of Seattle, who examined the body before it was brought here, said the boy had been bound, abused and beaten on the face and head.

Clay discovered under the fingernails was described as being like that commonly found along river banks in western Washington. It offered a clue to the locality in which the boy had been before his kidnapper dumped the body in the snow.

Similarities between the Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. kidnap-killing in New Jersey in 1932 and the George Weyerhauser kidnapping in Tacoma in May, 1935, were visible in the Mattson case.

To these were added the possibilities a demented person or a "chance" kidnapper had committed the crime.

SHELTON INQUIRY

State and municipal officers continued to study the Shelton, Wash., phases of the case which resulted in a man hunt in the region Sunday, January 3.

Police Chief Harold Bird of Tacoma, who had maintained a "hands off" policy in the case, issued an appeal to the public to give every assistance to authorities.

"All persons who own beach homes can be of much assistance to the police in this case," Chief Bird said. "If they will go to their summer homes and inspect them. If they find the houses have been broken into or anything out of the way has occurred they should call the nearest law enforcement agency."

MESSAGES RECEIVED

Many messages of sympathy reached the family after the boy's death became known. The Tennessee Senate adopted a resolution expressing sympathy for the parents and the "fervent" hope that justice shall "speedily overtake the author of this terrible crime."

The Mattsons' two remaining children, William, sixteen, and Muriel, fourteen, remained in seclusion with the family today. They have not been in school since their brother was captured in their presence in the Mattson living room December 27.

In Seattle, Virginia Chatfield, fifteen, a guest in the Mattson home that night and a witness to the kidnapping, was ill from shock.

Everett, Wash., Jan. 12.—Government agents, state patrolmen and local peace officers today combed the area seven miles south of Everett where the body of the kidnapped and murdered Charles Mattson, ten-year-old son of Dr. W. W. Mattson of Tacoma, was found yesterday. There were at least three carloads of government agents in the vicinity cruising up and down a network of graveled roads. With them were two or three state patrol squad cars and a number of state officers on motorcycles.

What they had found, if anything, remained a secret, for none would talk. Residents about the place where the cruelly battered body of the Tacoma child was found frozen in the snow, were equally uninformed. The search for clues appeared to be concentrated west of the Pacific highway, cars filled with the officers and agents turning around again as they came out on the main highway.

FIFTY IN SQUAD

Chief William Cole was in charge of the detail of state patrol estimated to number close to fifty men. The chief professed to know nothing of the reported finding of bloody clothing.

Every home for several miles about the spot where the body of the murdered boy lay was visited and the inhabitants asked to describe any strange or suspicious cars or people seen in the last few days. Every road was searched. Even trails and bypaths were scouted out by officers on foot.

CAR WITHOUT PLATES

State Patrolman Ted Horne set at rest rumors concerning a car having been abandoned suddenly by an apparently frightened man last night at Maxwelton. He said he had impounded the car because it had no license plates and the incident had no connection whatever with the search for the kidnapper of Charles Mattson.

Sharp Belgian Note to Spain

Associated Press

Brussels, Jan. 12.—Belgium threatened today to expel Spanish residents unless her demand for the return of the body of Baron Jacques de Borchgrave is answered speedily.

The warning was contained in a second, strongly-worded note to the Socialist government at Valencia concerning the death of Baron de Borchgrave, allegedly slain with other Belgians outside Madrid during a mutiny in the International Brigade.

MAY RECALL AMBASSADOR

Specifically the government threatened these retaliatory measures:

1. Expulsion of Spanish residents in Belgium.

2. Repatriation of Belgian residents in Spain.

3. Recall of the Belgian ambassador to Spain and cancellation of passports to the Spanish ambassador at Brussels.

The original note gave Spain forty-eight hours to deliver with military honors the body of the thirty-five-year-old first secretary of the embassy in Madrid, apologize and pay an indemnity of $35,000.

The Havis News Agency yesterday reported from Madrid that the body of Borchgrave had been sent to Alicante, where it would be placed aboard a French destroyer for carriage to Belgium.

Madrid, Jan. 12.—A pounding government counter-offensive today sent German shock troops and other insurgent forces reeling back through the fog northwest of Madrid and cleared the strategic Madrid-La Coruna road, the city's northwestern life-line, the Defence Council claimed today.

In a big drive to offset gains scored by the insurgent offensive of the last week, General Jose Miaja, Madrid commander, hurled his crack International Brigade and militia against the insurgent positions in the Majadahonda-Las Rozas sector.

The sector through which La Coruna highway runs is about ten miles northwest of Madrid.

Supported by tanks, the government forces swept the insurgents from positions commanding the highway, which forms an intersection with the road to Escorial at Las Rozas and runs close to the Madrid-Avila railway, it was announced.

The annual report of the Victoria West Liberal Social Club shows the club's activities have been well maintained. Officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, F. Watson, re-elected; vice-president, W. Miller; secretary-treasurer, F. Randall; executive, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Orchin, Mr. Watt, Mr. Johnstone and Mr. Mansfield. The usual weekly card game will be held this evening. There will be prizes and refreshments.

Commission For West Advocated

Sir John Aird, Addressing Bank of Commerce Annual Meeting in Toronto, Suggests Thorough Examination of Affairs of Prairie Provinces

Canadian Press

Toronto, Jan. 12.—Thorough examination of the affairs of the western provinces by a Royal Commission was endorsed by Sir John Aird in his presidential address at the annual meeting of the Canadian Bank of Commerce here today.

Speaking of the need for a practical policy of grain marketing and of necessary reconstruction measures in the west, Sir John said the west's problems were not as well understood as they should be. Prairie grain growers had grievances in the past in the "obvious disadvantage of selling their products at world prices" and buying their requirements in a "high protected domestic market."

Prosperity returned to the greater part of Canada in 1936, the meeting was told by Sir John.

REARMAMENT IS FACTOR

"The question today appears not to be whether the present business revival will continue," said Sir John, "but firstly, whether the prospective development of business can be prevented from assuming boom proportions with consequent over-speculation; and secondly, whether rearmament, which now induces a feverish demand for certain materials, can be replaced by constructive and more desirable enterprise."

SIR JOHN AIRD

Sir John urged world-wide tariff revision "to protect the consuming masses against possible sharp increases in living costs, and to prevent government relief expenditures from mounting so high as to nullify efforts to achieve budgetary balance."

CLASSIFICATION OF JOBLESS

The solution of Canada's unemployment problem called for a complete classification of all idle people in order to determine their fitness for work, he declared.

Normally importing countries are pursuing, and may continue to pursue for years, a policy of self-sufficiency," he said. "There is therefore an imperative need for improvement in the efficiency of western agriculture and for aggressive sales policies, as well as for more strenuous efforts to diversify farming and to withdraw sub-marginal lands from cultivation.

Sir John also urged reforestration and consolidation of certain government and municipal services in order to end their duplication.

RAILWAY IMPROVEMENTS

Introduction of more rapid freight and express service, and more attractive traveling conditions by the Canadian National Railways was advocated. "The C.N.R. must be kept in efficient condition by the provision of modern equipment," he said.

TRADE GAINS

Canada reached fourth place in world trade during 1936, S. G. H. Logan, general manager, said.

"Canadian exports in 1936 reached the billion-dollar mark for the first time since 1929, and exceeded the 1929 trade in volume.

"By its marked growth last year, mining laid the foundation for a great industrial structure and a substantial increase in population," he said.

"Field crop failures were widespread in 1936 owing to the most unusual weather, yet the smaller yield was of such high quality, and in such keen demand, that its value was greater than the preceding year by $80,000,000. Total agricultural income is estimated to have risen by 15 per cent and to have brought farm purchasing power close to the level of 1930."

Mr. Logan came to Toronto head office as superintendent of the foreign department in 1917. He was senior agent of the bank's New York office from 1923 until he returned to head office as general manager.

The new general manager, Mr. Arscott, is a native of Walkerton, Ont., and has served at a number of branches in Ontario and Quebec. From 1920 to 1922 he was assistant manager at Ottawa and came to Toronto late in 1922 as assistant manager. In 1929 he was appointed an assistant general manager at head office.

DISMISS FIVE NAVY WORKERS

British Dockyard Employees Discharged After Long Sabotage Inquiry

Associated Press

London, Jan. 12.—Five men were dismissed from service in two British naval yards today after a two-year investigation of suspected sabotage and leakage of confidential information.

"Five dockyard workers have been discharged, four from the Devonport dockyard and one from the Sheerness dockyard," an official Admiralty statement said.

The Devonport dismissals resulted from discovery of "certain documents" in the workboxes of four employees, it was said. The nature of the papers was not disclosed.

RUMORS HEARD

Officials said the lengthy inquiry into alleged sabotage had been provoked by uneasiness in connection with rumors on numerous foreign spies operating in England.

Detectives were called in to investigate damage to the submarine L-54 at Devonport in April, 1936. Another case which received official attention was the discovery of pieces of metal in the machinery of the Griffin, at the time Britain's newest destroyer.

Two other vessels, the Royal Oak and the Oberon, were delayed for four days in December, 1934, when short circuits in their electrical systems caused postponement of cruises with the Mediterranean fleet.

Later, the battlecruiser Repulse, the submarine H-28, the destroyer Velox and an unidentified submarine suffered mysterious interference.

Lindbergh Case Story Checked

Swede Claims Four Men and Woman Involved in Kidnapping

Associated Press

Washington, Jan. 12.—U.S. Justice Department agents are making a routine check of a story told by Gunnar Swedberg of Stockholm, Sweden, that the kidnappers of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr., were four men and a woman.

Skeptical officials disclosed yesterday a letter from Swedberg and a signed statement had been received at the State Department recently.

Swedberg contended Bruno Richard Hauptman, the German carpenter, executed for the kidnapping, was involved only in collection of the ransom.

MAP OF HOUSE

Part of the "evidence" he reported, it was said, was that he had seen the map of a house resembling the Lindbergh home at Hopewell, N.J., in the possession of those he accused.

Bureau of Immigration records show a Gunnar Swedberg was deported from New York City May 23, 1932, for failure to meet immigration requirements. Stricken with pulmonary disease, Swedberg had become a public charge within five years of admission to this country, officials said.

NINE MISSING IN AIRPLANE

Mexican Air Liner Believed Down in Rough Area East of Mexico City

Associated Press

Mexico City, Jan. 12.—Three search planes were forced to return here by bad weather to report they had found no trace of a transport plane missing since yesterday morning.

The Mexican Aviation Company's transport plane, carrying six passengers and a crew of three, was unreported between this city and Minatitlan, in Vera Cruz State.

ENGINEER MISSING

Prominent among the passengers was Hugh Edward Buckingham, lubrication engineer of the Aguila Oil Company and son-in-law of Guillermo Rennow, head of the company's sales department.

vast accord in "full and lasting settlement" of their difficulties.

Ambassadors of both countries returned to their capitals bearing dispatches which, diplomatic circles said, signalled overtures for a broad economic and political agreement.

It was a sudden and welcome lifting of the war clouds that had become increasingly darker since France and Britain stiffened their demands on Germany against volunteer aid to the insurgents in the Spanish civil war and reported German infiltration in Spanish Morocco.

BERLIN ASSURANCES

The first break came in Berlin where Chancellor Hitler and French Ambassador Andre Francois-Poncet yesterday exchanged mutual assurances of territorial integrity for Spain and her territories, including Spanish Morocco.

Immediately after the exchange, Francois-Poncet left for Paris with reports the Third Reich was leaning nearer and nearer a return to economic collaboration with the western European democracies.

Simultaneously Count Johannes von Welczeck, German ambassador to France, left for Berlin.

TO VISIT PARIS

The German minister of economic affairs, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, was understood to have made arrangements to come to Paris before the end of the month. Ostensibly a representative of the government at the inauguration of the German building exposition, he was reported vested with powers of an economic ambassador to resume last summer's conversations.

VOLUNTEERS PLANNED

In the background of the changed situation, Parliament met for its first session of 1937 to add to the easing of tension by passage of a bill prohibiting French volunteers from joining either side in Spain.

The economic negotiations to break down German isolation and regain foreign markets and raw materials for the Reich coupled with the exchange of mutual guarantees to isolate the Spanish civil war and keep hands off Morocco, were considered a possible prelude to a wide political settlement.

London, Jan. 12.—Europe breathes again. Paris and Berlin, which have been almost daggers drawn over Spanish Morocco, now talk of co-operation. London regards Chancellor Hitler's assurances to France on the integrity of Spain and Morocco as ending the crisis.

Britain is now pushing ahead with the proposed ban on volunteers. It is felt here that if the powers can be induced to follow the British example by banning volunteers there will be some hope both the Spanish government and General Francisco Franco will be ready to accept such a system of control as will place an effective barrier against foreign intervention in Spain.

MARTIN JOHNSON SPOKE OF DANGERS

Associated Press

Salt Lake City, Jan. 12.—Famed animal hunter Martin Johnson, who with his wife was a passenger on the airliner unreported today between Salt Lake City and Los Angeles, said here yesterday.

"The jungles are really safe when you know how to get along in them. America, probably because it is the most civilized place in the world, is the most dangerous. Why, I almost got killed by a taxi this morning."

DOG GUARDING BODY IS KILLED

Associated Press

Sarasota, Fla., Jan. 12.—Police reported yesterday they had to kill a dog guarding the body of Mrs. Margaret Bruce McLain Hughes, seventy-two-year-old recluse, whose one-room cabin contained newspaper clippings indicating she was connected with the Klondike gold rush.

Constable E. A. Kirkland said clippings and legal papers in the cabin indicated Mrs. Hughes either was a participant or was the wife of some wealthy man involved in the famed Alaska gold rush.

The constable said a number of jewels, apparently genuine, were found in the cabin.

The Best GRAY HAIR Remedy is Made at Home.

YOU can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy, by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Orlex Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. Orlex imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, makes it soft and glossy and takes years off your looks. It will not color scalp, is not sticky or greasy—does not rub off.

Britain's Foreign Policy Is Reviewed

Professor Soward Sees Need For More Courage and Sincerity Before Old Country Can Resume Leadership in World

More courage and sincerity were necessary before Great Britain could regain its leadership in world affairs, said Professor F. H. Soward of the University of British Columbia in an address on "British Foreign Policy in the Reign of King George V," before a well-attended meeting of the University Extension Society in the Girls' Central School yesterday evening.

Declaring that since 1930 British foreign policy had been a matter of uncertainty, Professor Soward hinted that there might be an improvement in the "second Georgian period."

In his address the University of British Columbia histbrian stressed the point that unlike France and Germany, Britain had never had a definite foreign policy, owing to the fact that the British were reluctant to commit themselves to any long-range plan but preferred to take things as they came.

In dealing with the foreign policy of a country, Professor Soward pointed out that there are always three underlying principles — the matters of geography, economic interest, and national psychology.

INSULAR ASPECT

As far as the first of these was concerned, Britain was an island which had been exempt from invasion since the Norman conquest. This had brought about an indifferent and even a suspicion of a large standing army and an enthusiasm for the navy which was always referred to as the "senior service."

The reign of King George V began with the cracking up of this insularity. Bleriot had just flown the Channel, and though it took twenty-five years for the British to realize the significance of the airplane, Baldwin had admitted in a recent speech that Britain's frontiers were now on the Rhine.

Professor Soward said that Britain was in Europe but was not of Europe, or as one man had expressed it—England was like a ship anchored in European waters but ready to sail away at any time.

Economically, however, Great Britain was anchored in Europe, the professor said. She had set herself up as a manufacturing country and every day 50,000 tons of food and 110,000 tons of merchandise were shipped to her.

TRADE ROUTES

Consequently there was a determination on the part of Great Britain to protect her trade routes which was demonstrated in the fact that she never annexed parts of Europe but was always interested in land along the sea routes. So Great Britain's foreign policy was not confined to Europe but took in the whole world.

As far as the psychology of the people was concerned, Professor Soward saw a deep mistrust of anything too logical. The British never used the phrase "according to plan" but preferred to "muddle through."

The Englishman was willing to shake hands after a fight and did not have a perpetual enemy. A moral appeal always affected the British people, but the speaker noted it did not have to be inconsistent with their material interests.

"With characteristic common sense King George played no role in the foreign policy of his country," Professor Soward said. "In this he compared with Edward VII who was known as the peace-maker and Queen Victoria who dismissed a foreign minister because he did not follow her views."

In May, 1910, when King George came to the throne, Europe was divided into two armed camps. In July, 1911, the Kaiser sent the German gunboat Panther to Agadir and for months there was tension over this Moroccan incident which paralleled the present situation.

In the same year the British cabinet learned of the staff conferences which had been going on between the British and French armies since 1906 for the first time, and a wave of popular indignation against this and a demand for extreme caution was the result.

HESITANCY OVER WAR

The success of the concert of Europe over the Balkan wars gave Grey a false impression of co-operation and led to the agonizing hesitancy of the British cabinet before the war. Until the end of July, 1914, the vast majority of the cabinet was against war. The only man who spoke out was Churchill who ordered the fleet to prepare for war.

At a Sunday meeting of the cabinet, the government finally decided to respect its obligations to France in the North Sea, but on Monday, August 3, came word from Belgium that it had been invaded.

The non-committal attitude of the British had changed, and last year the government spoke out and declared that it would defend Belgium and France against aggression, Professor Soward said.

The request for peace at the end of the war was sent to Washington, the professor said, and Wilson answered without any consultation with the other powers. Wilson did not invent the League, he declared. It was an Anglo Saxon idea but Wilson popularized it.

THREE PERIODS

Since 1919 Britain's foreign policy could be divided into three periods—the period of confusion from 1919-1923, the period of consolidation from 1924-1930, and the period of uncertainty from 1930 until the present time.

Professor Soward briefly sketched the state of Europe following the war, Britain's agreement to naval equality with the United States, the Balfour note on proposed cancellation of debts, and Britain's relationship with Russia.

There was a bitter atmosphere between Britain and France in the immediate post-war days but the irritating question of reparations was salved by a welter of plans. Finally the troops marched out of the Rhine five years ahead of schedule, and under the foreign leadership of Sir Austen Chamberlain, Germany entered the League of Nations. Britain and the United States were aloof, but came together in 1930.

Since 1931 Britain had a coalition government and a coalition government could not command a strong foreign policy, Professor Soward said.

J. L. Watson was in the chair.

SEES TOO MANY REGULATIONS

By-laws Hit Home Building, Says Ald. Worthington

Victoria was over-regulated, Alderman John A. Worthington declared at last night's City Council meeting, as he opposed strengthening of city regulations covering the cleaning of chimneys and fixing more definitely responsibility for chimney fires.

"I can cite you a hundred and one ways in which it is irksome to build in Victoria," he added, contending that city by-laws were largely responsible for the exodus of home-builders from the city to outside municipalities.

Alderman W. Lloyd Morgan, chairman of the fire wardens, informed the council the new proposal aimed specifically at the establishment of blame for chimney fires. When the fire department instituted an action against the owner or occupier of a building in which there was a fire, due to chimney neglect, it had the utmost difficulty in securing a conviction, he said.

Fire Chief Alex. Munroe stated the department had put out 138 chimney fires last year and had failed to secure any conviction for neglect. Prosecution was only undertaken in cases of gross carelessness, he said.

Alderman W. T. Straith stated it was advisable to secure a conviction in such cases to place an example before the public and avoid further trouble.

The by-law strengthening the penalty regulations in the matter, was put and carried, with Alderman Worthington alone in the negative.

SOOKE CAMP IS APPROVED

Council Agrees to Permit Workers on Watershed on Committee's Recommendation

The City Council last night formally approved the recommendation of the water board and health committee to allow the provincial government to establish its forestry camp at Sooke.

Objection to the camp had been taken by Alderman J. D. Hunter, chairman of the health committee, at the last meeting of the council.

Asked by Alderman Archie Wills if he had reconsidered his stand and approved the camp, the health board head said he was not personally satisfied but that he considered the proposed approval the best action that could be taken under the circumstances.

Alderman Wills wished confirmation of the point that the camp would not constitute a menace to the city's water supply.

Alderman W. T. Straith, a member of the health committee, explained that Dr. Richard Felton, city medical health officer, had said there would be no danger if adequate precautions were taken. The committee, he said, did not wish to take the responsibility of seeing that those precautions were respected.

It was understood, Alderman Hunter said, that if the health committee found anything at the camp of which it did not approve, it would approach the authorities immediately.

The council also approved another recommendation emphasizing the fact the men in the Kapoor camp on the Goldstream Watershed would have to adhere to health regulations rigorously.

W. B. Bigmore Of Alberni Buried

Alberni, Jan. 12.—Funeral services for W. G. Bigmore, who died at the West Coast Hospital on Monday from injuries received in an automobile accident, were held on Friday afternoon from All Saint's Anglican Church, with Rev. Glen Stevenson officiating.

Mr. Bigmore was born at Shelford, Cambridgeshire, England, fifty-nine years ago; came to Canada in 1906 and moved to Alberni twenty years ago. He was chairman of the Alberni school trustees for the last four years, retiring from the city council after some years chairman of the finance committee, to concentrate on school affairs.

He leaves to mourn him in addition to his widow, two sons, Jack, of the staff of the Bank of Montreal at Prince George, and Kenneth at home; one daughter, Patty on the nursing staff of St. Joseph's Hospital, Victoria; a brother, Charles, at Cherry Creek near Alberni, and another brother, Frank, at Vancouver.

FARMERS MEET ON PROBLEMS

C. H. Helgesen New Chairman of Island Group; Radio Move Backed

Weather conditions and icy highways delayed the start of the Vancouver Island Farmers' Institutes convention and held attendance down to eleven delegates yesterday, but in a busy afternoon several resolutions were handled.

C. H. Helgesen, Metchosin, was elected chairman for the coming year, replacing E. W. Neel, Duncan, who was thanked for his able service in that capacity for several years. Mr. Helgesen was also chosen island representative on the British Columbia advisory board of farmers' institutes with E. Balo as alternative.

W. J. Bonavia was re-elected secretary, and it was reported the island institutes now number twenty-six with a total membership of 660.

In recognition of his work in seed production Benjamin Young, Koksilah, was chosen representative on the B.C. Field Crop Union.

BETTER YEAR FOR FARMERS

In his presidential report, Mr. Neel, who alternated in the chair with C. E. Whitney-Griffiths, Metchosin, said improvement had been made in agriculture in the last season, but with little increase in prices to the consumer. He supported further trial of compulsory marketing control, stating voluntary co-operation had not been successful.

A. H. Petersen of the B.C. Coast Vegetable Marketing Board, submitted a defence of the vegetable scheme in reply to resolutions put forward and later withdrawn by East Sooke Institute, which wanted root crops exempted and a new poll taken of East Sooke farmers.

MEMBER HEARD

The Oriental situation in vegetable production and marketing on the mainland was reviewed in a brief address by Clive Planta, M.P.P. for Peace River, who recommended to the farmers a new weekly publication, Producer Consumer issued in Vancouver by Pacific News Service Limited, in association with S. F. M Moodie.

The Comox Farmers' Institute was on record by resolution as favoring the establishment of a public park at Oyster River and the creation there of botanical gardens, but this matter was stood over, due to absence of the Comox delegates. This matter was previously the subject of representations to the provincial cabinet by a general Comox delegation.

ISLAND RADIO STATION

The meeting went on record in favor of the movement for establishing a Canadian Broadcasting Corporation station on Vancouver Island.

A resolution of sympathy was forwarded to J. B. Munro, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, who was unable to attend, due to illness.

Saanich, Comox and Cowichan delegates were unable to attend because of highway conditions. Those present included Mr. Neel, Mr. Whitney-Griffiths, Mr. Helgesen, F. C. Blake, George A. Duncan, Lady Emily Walker, E. Balo, J. B. Edwards, George Bell, R. W. Robinson and Mr. Bonavia. Luncheon was tendered the delegates by the Department of Agriculture.

Italian Expelled From Switzerland

Canadian Press From Havas

Berne, Jan. 12.—The Swiss federal police yesterday ordered expulsion from Switzerland of the exiled Italian journalist, Carlo Apprato, one of the editors of the Journal des Nations of Geneva.

The reason stated was that his attitude toward the civil war in Spain was such as to "trouble the relations of Switzerland with foreign countries."

A Ghastly Business

IT IS NOT EASY TO SAY WHAT one would like to say about the diabolical case of young Charles Mattson. It is easier, however, to imagine just what agony of mind and body through which Dr. and Mrs. Mattson and their two remaining children are going. If it is any consolation to them they may rest assured that all the folk of the northwest in particular and throughout the continent in general are extending to them their heartfelt sympathy.

Two days after Christmas, without a care in the world, this happy ten-year-old boy was snatched from his home by a fiend incarnate who it is to be hoped will be quickly caught and given his desserts. Yesterday, young Charles's naked and battered body was discovered not far from the parental home. The suspense was ended. Failure of discovery would have prolonged the agony to limits the extent of which those who have not undergone the experience can not imagine.

The case of young Mattson brings one up sharp against a consideration of the sort of punishment which ought to be meted out to his abductor. Conformity with the law is essential. The administration of justice in the United States has for many years been the subject of bitter criticism by the people of the Union themselves. It is fitting perhaps at this time to quote a part of an editorial in The Saturday Evening Post of January 9, dealing with the cases of three men and their treatment under the United States parole system. The men are Horace (Hi Hi) Simmons, Paul Hoffman, and Daniel Colucci, all paroled convicts of Chicago. Here is the history of their crime and "punishment":

Simmons

1906—One year in Cook County jail for burglary.
1907—Shot and killed Policeman William Mooney. Sentenced to hang. Sentence commuted to life by the governor.
1914—Discharged after serving eight years and three months.
1918—Sentenced to one year to life for robbery.
1923—Escaped with two others from penitentiary hospital. Caught a few days later.
1933—Paroled. Would have been discharged from parole in December, 1936.

Hoffman

1914—Charged with burglary. No bill.
1915—Sentenced to one year in House of Correction. Larceny.
1917—Sentenced to Pontiac Reformatory.
1918—Discharged from Pontiac.
1918—Sentenced to nine months in House of Correction on plea of guilty to petty larceny.
1919—Acquitted of assault to commit robbery.
1920—Charged with burglary. No bill.
1921—Charged with burglary on three counts. No bills.
1922—Caught with two others in act of robbing a filling-station safe. Released on bond.
1922—Seven days later, while out on bond, caught in act of robbing a furniture store. A companion was shot and killed. Sentenced to one to five years in Joliet Penitentiary.
1924—Paroled. Rearrested on filling-station robbery charge and sentenced to one to twenty years.
1933—Paroled.
1936—Discharged from parole on August 23.

Colucci

1928—Arrested and fined for disorderly conduct.
1928—Arrested for speeding. Forfeited bond.
1929—Acquitted of disorderly conduct.
1929—Acquitted of larceny.
1930—Acquitted of disorderly conduct.
1930—Indicted for robbery of an Oak Park L station. Sentenced to one to ten years in Pontiac.
1933—Paroled.
1936—Discharged from parole on August 23.

It is pointed out by The Post editor that the above is merely the known criminal record of the men in question. "They are not likely to have been so unlucky, so unbungling, as to have been caught in every attempt," and "incidentally, despite the names of two of them, all three were second-generation aliens." Then we get this from last week's issue of Toronto Saturday Night, giving us a Canadian view of the parole system:

> Public suspicion and resentment over the operation of the parole system in Canada are increasing rapidly. A certain Omer Girard was sentenced recently at Hull for a very cold-blooded and brutal double murder. The Montreal Gazette points out that he had a record of villainy dating back to 1918, and that the late Mr. Justice Wilson several years ago predicted that he would end his life on the gallows. The parole system must surely have gone out of its way to ensure that the judge's prediction should be fulfilled; for in 1930 Girard was given a seven-year sentence, with lashes, for a grievous assault, yet in a very short time he was liberated to recommence his career of crime. We are far from convinced that either lashes or penal detention are the correct treatment for what may well have been a case for a psychiatrist; but the release of such men is far more unfair to society than detention can possibly be to themselves.

Nobody wants to subscribe to the doctrine that once the prison door has closed on a malefactor that malefactor should be considered an outcast for all time. That would be wrong in human principle. But the deterrent to crime must be made so as to put a stop to such a dastardly business as that of young Mattson.

Europe Breathes More Freely

AS THIS IS WRITTEN, NEWS from Europe suggests that reason is now prevailing or is about to prevail. London, Paris, Berlin, Rome and Moscow appear to be consulting with one another. Spanish insurgents have given France permission to make her own investigation of German troop infiltrations in Spanish Morocco—if such a course may be deemed necessary at the Quai d'Orsay in Paris. French and German governments—for some time at daggers drawn—are now talking of co-operation. Great Britain, always playing the role of mediator in the widest sense of the term, is by no means relaxing her efforts to make the ban on volunteers to the warring factions in Spain as effective as possible.

As the Canadian Press correspondent in London says, Europe breathes again, this time, it is to be noted, more easily and without so much of the apprehension that has marked her respiratory processes of late. The truth of the matter is, so it would seem, the great European powers are realizing now more than ever what another great international conflict of arms would mean to them and to the rest of the world. Supposing, for example, Great Britain and France were provoked by Germany and Italy to the point of war, that an open breach of diplomatic relations were to be followed by actual fighting, what would be the result? Any schoolboy of this day and generation can supply the answer. Within a few hours, cities, towns, and villages in all four countries—and perhaps in many other countries—would be laid in waste with a toll of human slaughter which not the most elastic imagination can compute. So we may say that while Spain is doing all this to herself, indescribably tragic though it is, her great tragedy may be the means of bringing militaristic and imperialistic forces to their senses.

Senator Farris

SENATOR JOHN WALLACE DEBeque Farris, K.C., LL.B., B.A.! This is the full title by which one of New Brunswick's distinguished native sons will be known henceforward. Of course, it was while the present century was in its swaddling clothes, as it were, that he came to the other end of the continent, to wit, British Columbia. In his adopted province he has made a name for himself, primarily as one of its most brilliant legal minds, but he has been known to "shine" in politics. How could anybody, coming from New Brunswick, we would like to know, be anything but a politician? Not all have been Liberals who have come west from New Brunswick. But Senator Farris could not help being a Liberal. He was built that way. The Times has known him intimately in the political and public sense for twenty years. But this newspaper, however, wonders how a man of the youthful age of fifty-nine will feel at home in the Senate at Ottawa. We shall have to say, nevertheless, that Prime Minister Mackenzie King has made a wise choice in the filling of the vacancy caused by the death of Senator McDonald. And, after all, Senator Farris, between the discharge of senatorial duties, will be able to improve his golf. Congratulations, Senator Farris!

History Repeats

GREAT BRITAIN TELLS GERmany! Not perhaps in these words, but, in effect, that was what Londoners saw on the "contents bills" of the leading dailies in the great metropolis on a summer day in 1911. Nobody knew what was going to happen. In Trafalgar Square, in the much agitated "city," in the West End, around the historical "Elephant and Castle," along the Euston Road, as far north as 'appy 'ampstead—it was the same question: Is there going to be war between Britain and Germany? As many a cockney said: War, abaht wot?

This brings us to January 12, 1937, with another Moroccan problem on hand, not this time as to the question of whether there shall be an open conflict between Great Britain and Germany, but whether there shall be lighted the fuse of international conflict which followed three years after what has gone down in history as the famous "Agadir Incident." That was the incident which prompted the cockney to say "War, abaht wot?"

Early in May, 1911, there was a considerable amount of disorder in Morocco. So much so that it induced the French to occupy Fez, and on July 1—Canada's natal day—Germany announced the dispatch of the gunboat Panther, the snarling feline destined to have its wicked teeth drawn under a British-French "anaesthetic." Go back to May, 1911, and recall that after a cabinet meeting in Downing Street, Sir Edward Grey, then Great Britain's Foreign Secretary, informed Count Metternich, Germany's Ambassador to Great Britain at that time, that the British Government could not disinterest itself in Morocco, and that until Germany's intentions were made known their attitude must remain one of reserve. There intervened "the period of silence" during which Germany said nothing to England but continued to bring pressure to bear on France. On May 21, Mr. Lloyd George took the occasion of a speech at the bankers' annual dinner in London to make it plain, in diplomatic language, that if Germany meant war, she would find Great Britain on the side of France.

Coming from the leader of the least imperialistic section of the cabinet, the speech produced a great impression. The accession of Mr. Lloyd George in foreign policy to the opposite wing of the government was decisive. As Mr. Winston Churchill said at the time, "We were able immediately to pursue a firm and coherent policy." On May 25, Sir E. Grey received a communication from Germany "so stiff that the fleet might be attacked at any moment"; the German government refused to explain its intentions and the British refused to explain Mr. Lloyd George's speech. The inference the latter was intended to convey, however, was obvious—the result proved it.

The main point in Mr. Lloyd George's speech was, of course, this straight "tip" to Germany: If you do not remove the Panther from Agadir you, to use a colloquialism, will have to take it "in the neck." The big "fight" was postponed.

Notes

Even amateur statesmen are turning pro. Pro-Red or pro-Fascist.

In China a Red seems to be anybody who does not say "yes, sir" to a Japanese.

Sometimes we have an uneasy suspicion that the inferior race is the one called man.

INSIDE STORIES

THE MAGAZINES and reviews, which always have to lag a lot behind the newspapers, but perhaps have more time to think, are now filled with their inside stories of King Edward's abdication, their explanation of the real causes, their calculation of the probable results. These accounts vary from Mr. Baxter's honest adoration of the monarchy in MacLean's, to the eminent Mr. Brailsford's dispatch to The New Republic that the monarchy has been discredited. You take your pick between a bewildering variety of possibilities.

You take your pick and you take it according to your own prejudices. That is the essential thing about these larger questions. We always form our views, not on the evidence, which is too much of an effort, but on our prejudices; and as a large matter like an abdication is capable of so many versions and explanations it can serve an infinite variety of prejudices, every shade and color, satisfying everybody.

Thus, in our excellently-managed world, it is possible for people to have profound views on the abdication even though they hardly know the multiplication tables. You meet simpering flappers at afternoon tea parties who have formed unalterable convictions on the whole complicated business, on the future of the Empire, and on the prospective war, having read nothing but the headlines and the feature stories about Mrs. Simpson's wardrobe and coiffure. You meet respectable Christian spinsters, models of propriety in their own lives, who think the whole unhappy business could have been nicely ironed out if the former king had kept the lady without marrying her in the old kingly style.

These people grow very violent in their views, and the less they know, the less they have read, the more violent they grow. Men who have devoted most of their lives to public questions are inclined to be humble in their opinions. They hesitate to form final judgments, knowing the innumerable possibilities of mistake, but the ignorant have no hesitation whatever. Everything is simple to them. They seize instantly on the ultimate truth and cling to it belligerently, never suspecting that it is merely their ultimate personal prejudice.

That is the type you require in politics, for if you elect a student and a philosopher he will know too well that he can never hope to achieve anything of importance, that he can never hope to reach anything approximating the truth about anything, and he will end in despair by doing nothing. What you need in politics is a fairly ignorant man who has no cosmic sense at all, who never pauses to realize that he will be dead in a short time and all his wosks forgotten, who can get all excited about a tariff, a budget, an economic system or a throne. That is the kind of man who goes ahead and does things.

PROFOUND THOUGHTS

MEANWHILE, the thoughtful man should not allow himself to be aggravated by the bleat and blatter of the thoughtless. He should not be annoyed to find that while most of the public has never bothered to think at all about the economic system we live under, the state of our civilization, because that is an effort, yet it has no hesitation in forming final opinions on such a matter as the abdication because such a matter appeals not to its reason but to its prejudices and its emotions and is no effort at all. The thoughtful man shouldn't let these things distress him because, if he is really thoughtful, he will know that the public, unable to think or reason, probably will reach as wise a conclusion as he will because neither of them will be right. Democracy is the theory that a mass mistake is safer than the vagaries of one mind, and it seems to be.

These, of course, are profound and moving thoughts and no doubt you would like to read another column of them; but what I started out to say, when diverted from my purpose, was that there are not only an infinite number of prejudices possible in these larger matters but an infinite number of ways of presenting them. It all depends on the viewpoint of the person who presents them; not merely his viewpoint on these particular facts but his viewpoint on life generally.

Thus, numerous people complain to me about the way the magazine Time presents the literal truth. It annoys them, somehow, and yet they can't put their finger on the trouble. What annoys them is Time's viewpoint on life itself. It writes everything with the viewpoint that life is a pretty low comedy, human nature a pretty mean thing and civilization a circus. That other remarkably successful American publication, Esquire, presents the facts with a leer as if life were the pursuit of sex. The Times of London presents them as if life were a well-bred, genteel argument between Oxford gentlemen, who are constantly disturbed by caddish foreigners in the worst sort of bad taste. The brilliant New Yorker presents them as if the main problem of life was the right tie and hat for the occasion, as if there were nothing more important than the current cocktail. Whereas all the big women's magazines approach every problem, from presidential politics to the new salad recipes, with the conviction that Mother Love conquers all, and if every woman knew how to serve attractive made-over dishes the economic system would work fine.

Then you have the pink Socialist magazines, like The New Republic and The Nation, which conceive life to be a problem of economics, human beings a series of statistics, human emotions a matter for expert sociologists to arrange according to a well-thought-out plan based on the findings of actuaries. Finally, you have the real leftist papers like The New Masses, which conceive life and all human affairs as working out according to a perfect, invariable pattern, first discovered by Mr. Marx and later elaborated by Mr. Strachey, and are vastly annoyed when the darn thing invariably works out some other way.

AS THEY SEE IT

THUS, ALSO, you will find all political theories and all governmental policies throughout the world colored, changed and interpreted according to the attitude of the men in office toward life as a whole. The whole New Deal in the United States, with all its virtues and all its mistakes, is based simply on Mr. Roosevelt's conception of life as a swell game, never to be taken too seriously, but worth playing. Britain's policies for years have been the flower of Mr. Baldwin's instinctive belief that life should be a decent, quiet transaction between gentlemen, and that if bounders insist on butting in they must be treated kindly at first and thrown out on the street if necessary.

Europe has been bedeviled for years by Mussolini's theory that life is a Fourth of July parade with him leading it, and Hitler's fevered conception of life as a third-rate melodrama.

Our affairs in Canada have been conditioned almost entirely of late years by Mr. Bennett's conviction that human nature is a weak thing which needs strong handling by superior minds, and Mr. King's belief that human nature is a noble thing in chains which will rise to new heights if he can only unloose it by lowering the tariff. And all our views on public affairs are conditioned by what wages we get, how cold the weather is and what we ate for breakfast. It is as safe a way to regard life as any.

ODDITIES OF BRISBANE

From The New York Herald Tribune

Most of Arthur Brisbane's working day was usually devoted to executive detail. For twenty-five years he was editor of The Evening Journal. In 1934 Mr. Hearst assigned to him the task of building up the circulation of The Daily Mirror. In his spare time he attended to large real estate holdings, the income from which was believed to exceed the $265,000 annual salary paid to him by Mr. Hearst. His net income from all sources was reported in 1935 to be $1,070,000.

Although in his hard-working youth he chose to rise at 4.30 and 5 a.m., his habits gradually became retarded until he found himself retiring at dawn and rising at noon.

His office at The American was packed full of old chairs, tables, desks, stoves, waste-paper baskets, bookcases, which he had accumulated during fifty years in the newspaper business. He hated to throw things away.

This tendency to hoard became manifest most curiously at mealtimes. Sometimes when dining at fine restaurants and hotels he would find himself unable to finish all the food on his plate. On such occasions he would summon the waiter and ask him if his left-over morsels would be wasted. If the waiter said that the odds and ends of food would be given to the dog pound or some other worthy charity, Mr. Brisbane would permit his plate to be removed. But if the waiter replied the food was headed for the garbage pail, Mr. Brisbane would clean his plate.

GROUNDING ELECTRICITY

W. L. Clark in Windsor Star

When we wrote about a stream of water being used at the Triborough bridge in New York to ground the electricity, we did not mention the method used at the Ambassador bridge. They have a rod stuck in the ground just by the toll office and, as a car approaches, this rod touches the auto and grounds any current that may have been charged into the car by fast running. The rod saves getting an electric shock when you hand the collector your fare. Perhaps you have never noticed the little rod that is flexible and is about one foot high. But you can see it, any time you go over.

I've had a lot of ups and downs—mostly downs. So when a citizen hands me a hard-luck story, I'm all ears. I work on the theory that you'd better treat 'em nice going up, because you've got to meet 'em coming down.—Victor A. Meyers, former band leader, now lieutenant-governor of Washington.

"EXTRAVAGANT" ESQUIMALT

To the Editor: — Your January 8 report of the provincial survey of taxation is very interesting, especially to a councillor who has tried to bring comparisons of Esquimalt taxation with other municipalities before his fellow councillors, but has always been voted down.

I notice in the report the township of Chilliwack pays $17.60, compared with Esquimalt $50. In fact, there are only two district municipalities higher than Esquimalt and they are in the hands of a receiver, which Esquimalt should be.

In the early part of last year I used Chilliwack as a comparison with Esquimalt in the cost of administration, which was as follows for 1935: Chilliwack, $6,500.43; Esquimalt, $14,580.64. Population, Chilliwack 5,802, Esquimalt (civil) 2,774; Chilliwack acres, 6,500; Esquimalt acres, 1,500.

In going over the financial statements of all the other district municipalities quoted in the provincial report I fail to find one that is so extravagant in its cost of administration as Esquimalt.

My findings in two years as councillor for Esquimalt is that it is governed by professional politicians, hence the extra cost of $8,000 for administration and the increased mill rate from twenty-eight to forty in three years.

H. HODGSON, Councillor.

LUCKY AMERICA

From The Buffalo Evening News

Walter Lippmann points out that America is peculiarly fortunate in not having one city which is the financial and economical nerve-centre of the nation. A constant succession of air raids against London might shake the British Empire to its foundations. Similar attacks upon Paris might well shatter France, the bombing of Berlin might induce Germany to sue for peace. The bombing of the Atlantic seaboard by a foreign foe, while admittedly serious, would not be disastrous. Americans, taking note of Great Britain's frantic efforts to strengthen its air forces against possible sky fleets from over the channel, may well thank a kindly Providence for 3,000 miles of ocean between this nation and danger.

Modern Etiquette

By ROBERTA LEE

Q. When a man enters a theatre, church, or other such place, should he remove his topcoat before he starts down the aisle, or wait until he reaches his seat?

A. It is preferable to remove the topcoat at the head of the aisle. If there is no time to do this, wait until you reach your row of seats. Never go down the aisle disrobing.

Q. Is a friendly note accompanying a gift ever out of place?

A. Never. A note is not obligatory, but it always adds a touch of friendliness to the gift.

Q. Should a child introduce his small friends to adults?

A. Yes; this is excellent training for the child.

SILENT COUNCILLORS

To the Editor:—In a very well-worded report, which appeared in December 31 edition of The Times, the protest of one, J. Thackeray, was duly received and filed. However, they (the council) were so much concerned in heaping words of praise on those officials connected with the relief departments that they did not have time to defend the righteousness of notifying those who were in the most unfortunate situation of being in debt to Oak Bay for God's free water, that their homes were being put in the tax sale. Did I say free water? My mistake.

I presume the council are above defending themselves.

INTERESTED.

FOUL OR FAIR

To the Editor:—As Mr. T. Guy Sheppard and myself are apparently rowing in the same direction, though evidently in different boats, it would be folly to engage in any "rocking" racket. However, I trust you will allow me to explain that in my letter submitted to you recently I wrote "foul-blow to the Church (not "blow" simply, as printed January 4). I naturally had no intention of leaving an opening to justify the author of that Boxing Day letter in flattering himself that his jab at religion had earned points rather than disqualification.

Mr. Sheppard's paragraph on "duty" is rather side-stepping the issue—or "kicking into touch"—(a notorious weakness of the H.L.I.'s in pre-war days).

I fancy that by his statement that "ex-servicemen are King's men, not Parliament's, Mr. Sheppard has started something as intriguing as the old controversy as to which came first—the hen or the egg! (To me, ex-servicemen are civilians—but no matter.) GEOFFREY LE GALLAIS.

"Robinhurst," Cranmore Road.

THE FORGOTTEN WAR VETERANS

To the Editor:—In your issue of November 14 appeared a letter with reference to us forgotten war veterans. I was hopeful that this would remind Premier Pattullo that there are still a few war veterans on relief in the country districts—and Christmas being near, a few hours' extra road work to enable us to get a little something extra to eat that day would be appreciated.

But my hopes did not materialize, for, on getting my work ticket for next month, I found the same old meagre allowance.

How the Minister of Labor and the Relief Administrator can figure $7 is ample to keep an adult in food, clothing, light, water, etc., is beyond me.

Well, British Columbia is going Oriental, so I guess they figure it is a good chance to break us in to the Oriental standard of living.

Now that the British Columbia government has restored the salary cuts of its civil servants, I would suggest they restore the 15 per cent cut in the relief allowances of the returned men that the Aberdeen-educated investigator recommended and put into effect two years and three months ago. (That was one time they did not forget us).

I have had the honor of serving on active service under the past three British sovereigns, but the discriminative treatment accorded me and other returned men is just about making me see red.

FINAL NOTICE FROM YOUNG CITIZENS

To the Editor:—For the information of your readers and of "Missourian," I wish to state that the officers of the Young Citizens' League (which I may say is a league of considerably more than three members) do not intend to reply to any further letters of "Missourian" bearing reference to it or individuals connected with it. It is obvious to all that the letters of "Missourian" are persistent attempts to blacken by means of insinuations and innuendo, the good name of our league. We do not expect everybody to believe as we do, but at the same time, all really fair-minded people are willing to concede the worthy features in the efforts of others.

The members of our league have been instructed not to reply to further letters of that writer, as it is abundantly clear that our replies to his abusive accusations and preposterous queries, as well as the replies of others in sympathy with us, are merely used as excuses for further berating us. People are beginning to realize that "Missourian's" persistent criticisms arise out of something more than mere casual interest in topics of the day. They are too deliberate and systematic.

I am sure that your readers perceive that the letters in these columns during the past year condemning us as Fascists, reactionaries, subsidized agents, etc., are in most cases the old trick of attempting to discredit a movement for political reasons. Strong forces have been set in motion against us, the pioneers in a cause of great importance.

Says our Prime Minister, Mr. King: "What is unfortunate is that much that is sincere and important in attempting to alleviate the conditions of the working classes is labeled Communism. What is equally unfortunate is that much that is sincere and important in attempting to maintain law and order is labeled Fascism"

In our case, our efforts to combat Communism and other forms of extremism as being potential menaces to our Canadian democracy and our efforts to bring to public attention the results in other countries where these extremist tendencies have gone unchecked, is being met by opponents with the cry of "Fascist!"

Brilliant Play Sets Bid

Defence Provides Entry Into Partner's Poor Hand, For Lead Through Losing King in Dummy

By WM. E. McKENNEY

Secretary, American Bridge League

In many articles on bridge, the favorite theme is some well-played hand, in which declarer, by one of the standard types of play, makes his contract, or in which a partnership, through exchange of information, reaches a good contract. Not nearly enough stress is put upon defensive play, perhaps because good defence is so much more difficult, and the hands which illustrate it are much rarer.

I am indebted to my friend, Sam O'Connell, of Holyoke, Mass., for an example of one of the finest defensive plays I have seen in a long time. It was made by his partner, Dr. Robert E. Cleary, also of Holyoke, and was played in a duplicate game at the Holyoke Masonic Temple.

SOLUTION TO PREVIOUS CONTRACT PROBLEM

Dr. Cleary sat West and O'Connell East. O'Connell naturally opened the nine of spades, in response to his partner's bid. Dr. Cleary played low, when the jack was played from dummy and North won the trick with the ace. This failure to cover was a good play, but one that is seen every day in the year, as nothing could be gained by covering, North being marked with both ace and king.

North now led a low club to dummy and returned the eight of hearts. Here was the major play of the hand. Dr. Cleary played the jack. He reasoned from the bidding that North held a trump suit of at least six cards, and the only chance to beat the contract was for O'Connell to get the lead once more, and lead a diamond through dummy's king.

North, reasoning that West now held either the lone ace or the ace and ten, returned a low trump. East won, shot a diamond through the king, and Dr. Cleary then cashed two diamond tricks and later, of course, the ace of trumps, setting the contract one trick.

(Cuyright, 1936, NEA Service Inc.)

Today's Contract Problem

South has the contract for six spades. After the opening lead, the hand can be made, despite the two apparent losers in hearts, if South is careful in planning timing of the play. How can he win 12 tricks, with a diamond opening?

North: ♠ A K 9 8 5 ♥ J 10 6 ♦ J 9 8 ♣ A K

INSURANCE AID SOUGHT

Alderman W. Lloyd Morgan Presses For Grant to Assist in Fire Protection

"Some arrangement should be reached with the insurance companies whereby they should agree to shoulder a percentage of the necessary cost in keeping the fire department at the highest possible level," Alderman W. Lloyd Morgan chairman of the fire wardens, declared in his maiden speech at the City Council meeting last night.

His statement was included in a general review of the fire insurance question which preceded motions by him to send letters to the companies asking them to contribute to the upkeep of the department and to Oak Bay requesting a conference to consider the city's present agreement with that municipality.

Both motions were carried

The whole question was raised when the fire wardens submitted a progress report on their deliberations over the necessity of reorganization to meet the new hours of work act which gives the firemen a sixty-hour week.

THREE ALTERNATIVES

The report set forth three alternatives by which the city could meet the situation. One suggestion covered establishment of the sixty-hour week and the employment of twelve more men to fill out the department to its full strength. A second aimed at the closing of one or two firehalls and the centralization of the men in other stations. The third suggested the maintenance of all halls with the insurance companies contributing to the increased costs.

Noting there were 10,500 buildings in Victoria, Alderman Morgan said the city maintained a fire department at an expense of $160,000 yearly for their protection. That amounted to about $15.50 per building. Watermains and water contributed to the expense of the protection.

He estimated the total premiums paid by Victorians annually to companies at $300,000, which raised the fire protection cost to $460,000, or about $46 a building.

EXTRA COSTS

To meet the new regulations on working hours it would cost the city another $20,000, or an extra $2 a year on each building if the fire department staff was increased, the alderman continued.

Over a five-year period, ending in 1935, premiums amounting to $4,337,000 were collected from fire protection areas on dwellings in British Columbia, he said. During the same time, the fire losses amounted to $1,176,000, leaving a profit on that class of insurance of $3,161,000.

At the same time, Alderman Morgan continued, unprotected areas in British Columbia paid premiums of $1,652,000 and sustained losses, paid by the companies, of $1,245,000.

"It is apparent the owner of a dwelling in a protected area is paying in premiums for the losses the insurance companies make in their risks in unprotected areas," he added, stating the very low losses in protected areas was due to the protection they secured.

He cited further figures to show the exceptional profits made by the fire insurance companies in British Columbia.

PAY FOR OTHER AREAS

"It is fire protection which enables the insurance companies to show a profit. In a nutshell, we support a fire department at a yearly cost of more than $160,000 to maintain a low rate of insurance in the unprotected areas of the province. The total fire losses in Victoria are among the lowest in the province. This is solely due to the efficiency of our fire department. To maintain it at its present level with its increased cost added to the mill rate is not possible," he said, before outlining the alternatives of securing a grant from the companies or closing two halls.

Alderman Morgan remarked upon the low loss in Victoria this year.

"This low loss certainly merits consideration on the part of the underwriters of a request for a grant to help compensate for this extra cost being placed upon us by the Hours of Labor Act," he concluded.

His motion to send the request to the fire underwriters was seconded by Alderman T. W. C. Hawkins before Alderman James Adam recommended the council to hold the matter over for a discussion at a meeting of the members in committee.

INSTITUTION OF NEW HOURS

Alderman Archie Wills, a fire warden, raised question over the immediate application of the new hours of work. The firemen, he said, wanted them instituted forthwith. Was the council prepared to go ahead on that basis, or was it going to delay for another six weeks, he asked.

"This is law now. I don't see how we can delay it," Alderman S. H. Okell remarked.

The extra money needed under the new arrangement had to be secured immediately, Alderman Williams said. The question, as he saw it, was—who was going to pay it, the city or the underwriters.

Alderman R. A. C. Dewar remarked the date of application of the new hours had not been set.

"It should be in effect now," Mayor Andrew McGavin said.

Alderman Dewar thought the new hours should be instituted immediately.

Alderman Wills said the fire wardens had intended to discuss with the council the three proposals before the city

ON SPOT

Alderman John Worthington noted the government had placed the city on the spot and it was up to the city to find a way out.

Mayor McGavin complimented Alderman Morgan on the presentation of his report before the alderman brought in a second motion to confer with Oak Bay on the existing agreement standing between the city and that municipality for fire protection.

Alderman Okell thought that matter might be discussed after the morning council meeting on Friday.

Oak Bay was prepared to discuss the issue, Alderman Hawkins reported.

The two motions were finally put and carried, with the understanding Oak Bay would be invited to meet the council Friday morning.

Council Speeds Money By-laws

Final Passage Scheduled Tomorrow; City Enters Wider Money Market

The financial machinery of the city moved quickly last night to fill up the holes in Victoria's sinking fund, to make provision for the annual bank loan and to meet the major maturity falling due next week. Three finance by-laws to that purpose received preliminary readings and negotiations opened for the sale of city owned debentures.

All matters will be given further consideration at special meetings tomorrow and Friday morning.

The by-laws, due for final passage tomorrow afternoon, include the annual loan by-law, which makes provision for the city to borrow from the bank on anticipation of 1937 tax collections; the sinking fund shortage loan by-law, which aims at the issuance of new debentures to meet the deficiency in the fund for the forthcoming maturity and borrowings last year; and the serial debenture refunding loan by-law, covering issuance of new debentures to supplant those due on February 1.

The city moved into a more open market to sell certain of its bonds during the meeting. It rescinded a motion passed last month for certain sales and gave approval to the following recommendation from the finance committee:

"That the city comptroller be instructed to call for tenders for the sale by the city of £10,000 (approximately $48,600) of G.T.P. 4s of 1962 and $135,000 C.N.R. 3s of 1953, from all licensed bond dealers and banks in the city; tenders returnable by 10 a.m. January 15, for settlement January 20, and tenders to be submitted to the City Council at a meeting to be held at 10.30 a.m. on January 15."

CITY COUNCIL BRIEFS

In view of the fact the new city building by-law will allow greater elasticity in its requirements for buildings in the downtown area, the City Council last night granted permission to the Cathay Apartment interests to proceed with work of a nature not permitted under the old by-law. That action was recommended by the building inspector.

Applications for tag days during the year in the city must be filed at the City Hall not later than February 1, the City Council decided last night on the recommendation of the finance committee.

A half day's pay will be given to relief men who report for work and who are prevented from carrying out their duties through the inclemency of the weather, the City Council ruled last night. The council left with the engineer the power to decide whether or not the weather was suitable for work.

The City Hall's heating plant has provided the building with adequate and satisfactory heat for the first winter since the hall was built, Alderman Ed. Williams reported to the City Council last night. It had reduced fuel costs as well as the number usually absent through colds, and had won the approval of the employees generally, he said.

The copy of a letter from heads of the Victoria Golf Club, outlining a tentative request to the Premier to earmark for a golf tournament $3,000 of any jubilee grant the government might give the city this year, was referred by the City Council last night to the jubilee committee

Victoria's position in respect to claims made against the city for back interest on the Victoria Cold Storage and Terminal Warehouse Ltd. bonds was virtually unchanged, a letter from the city comptroller-treasurer and the city solicitor informed the City Council.

A communication from Dr. Clem Davies, suggesting the conversion of the old worsted mills building into an auditorium, was referred by the City Council last night to the lands committee. Similar action was taken with a letter from the Empire Realty Company advancing argument against the requested option on three lots adjacent to the Strathcona Hotel on Douglas Street.

Moral support of the city for the Junior Chamber of Commerce's efforts to secure better radio facilities for Victoria was voiced at yesterday evening's meeting of the City Council. A report on a meeting called by the Junior Chamber to draft a memorandum on the issue was presented by Alderman John Worthington. He called upon the council to be well represented at a luncheon on Friday at the Empress Hotel, which Major W. E. Gladstone Murray, general manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, is scheduled to attend.

Extension of the B.C. Electric Company Ltd. pole line on the first road off Moss Street, south of Fort Street, was approved by the City Council last night.

The City Council last night gave unstinted praise to the Gyro Club for its Christmas Hamper campaign, to ex-Alderman Bob Smith for his work in that drive, and also in connection with the unemployed single men's dinner Christmas Day, and to the Boy Scouts for their activities in providing reconditioned toys for children of needy families in the city during the festive season.

The Esquimalt Council last night gave its endorsement to the move of the Junior Chamber of Commerce to obtain a national radio outlet for Victoria. Councillors Albert Heald and Frederick G. Eaton expressed the opinion that such a station should be nationally owned.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Clarence Brenne of Great Central, the bride wore a princess gown, primrose-colored taffeta, with a coronet of white gardenias on her hair and carried a trailing bouquet of white carnations. Mrs. C. Brenne, as matron of honor, wore jade green taffeta, and carried rose chrysanthemums.

Mussolini's Son To Marry Soon

Associated Press

Rome, Jan. 12.—A quiet parish wedding in Rome next February 9, was announced today for Lieut. Vittorio Mussolini, oldest son of Premier Mussolini, and Orsola Buvoli of Milan, pretty, fair-haired and penniless.

At the same time it was disclosed Vittorio first had told his father of his intentions to wed Signorina Buvoli with much trepidation because her family, while excellent socially, is very poor.

His father, however, who always has declared he wants to "go evermore to the people," asked only whether she was healthy and capable of bearing a family. He met the girl in Milan when he went there for a speech last November—and approved.

Stimulating Talk To Club Members

Members of clubs in general who were prone to criticize that "they did not get enough out of it" should remember that each member got out of an organization just as much as she, or he, put into it, Mrs. A. Farquharson told the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club last night.

She was speaking at the supper meeting at the Y.W.C.A. on the subject of "The Club," in which she reviewed the history of the club and her own long association with it. Mrs. Farquharson recalled the formation of the Kumtuks Club in 1921, and its subsequent change of name on entering the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Among the qualifications for membership was that the members use their municipal, provincial and federal franchise whenever possible. She hoped that the custom of asking the members to give short talks from time to time on the line of work in which each is specially interested be revived.

In her able analysis of the club's values, Mrs. Farquharson spoke of the benefit and pleasure she had derived from the friendships made both in locally and in the wider field, and referred to the many courtesies extended to Victoria members at the international conventions held in the United States, thus stimulating international amity.

Mrs. H. V. Bartholomew presided at the gathering. Mrs. James Bland moved the vote of thanks to the speaker, and Miss M. Nickerson acted as accompanist for the musical part of the proceedings. Members were reminded of the annual meeting to be held on Monday evening, January 25.

Housing Act Not Broad Enough

Does Not Help Lower Income Class, Council Women Told

That the Dominion Housing Act will be ineffectual unless it is considerably broadened to enable people of lower incomes to take advantage of it was one of the interesting observations made by Alfred Carmichael in his interesting analysis of the act before the Local Council of Women yesterday afternoon.

BAD HOUSING COSTLY

Mr. Carmichael in his preamble cited from a number of authorities to show the effect of bad housing conditions upon the moral and physical welfare of the people, and that it cost society and governments generally more to maintain slum areas than anything else.

In Canada it was computed by government experts that there was a shortage of 55,000 houses due to natural increase in population, and that over 300,000 houses, exclusive of the slum areas, were in a state unfit for human habitation. In England since the war, 2,804,888 houses had been built, and in 1935 about 1,000 houses a day had been built, an intensive programme which was still being carried on.

CANADA BACKWARD

Not only did such a programme benefit those who were thus properly housed, but it also gave a big fillip to industry and employment, Mr. Carmichael noted. Reference was also made to the building activity in Sweden and other European countries, to give emphasis to his contention that Canada was the only country not doing anything to meet the problem.

After citing figures to show that 56.2 per cent of the wage earners of Canada were practically in the "poverty" class and unable to pay more than $10 a month for rent, the speaker maintained that either the income level of the people must be raised so that they could afford to pay for decent houses, or the rentals must be lowered to a point where people could afford to pay.

The purpose of the Housing Act was to improve social conditions and relieve unemployment, but the act was very limited in its scope, did not provide for slum clearance, or help the man getting only part-time employment. In fact, it only benefited those in the highest income brackets, he said.

Mr. Carmichael suggested a non-interest bearing scheme whereby the loans could be arranged through the Bank of Canada, thus ensuring lower administration charges, and a removal of the present red tape which was irksome to both builders and prospective home-owners alike.

Mrs. C. C. Spofford, who presided, thanked Mr. Carmichael for his interesting talk.

Has Eight Musts For Girl Guides

London, Jan. 12.—Girl Guides of Dorset attending the camp being organized near London for 250 Empire Guides in connection with the coronation next May must, among other things, "be friendly toward overseas people she will meet at the coronation," says Lady Lilian Digby, commissioner for Dorset.

Seven other separate qualities are demanded for attendance at the camp: The Dorset girl must be a first-class camper, have good manners, be a good mixer, and a good entertainer. She must have perfect health (she must not develop appendicitis, for instance, during the camp), and she must be impervious to whatever weather the month of May brings. Finally she must have ten days free, May 4 to May 14.

Twenty Years In Bed; Now Busy

Tiskilwa, Ill., Jan. 12.—Seventy-two-year-old Mrs. Henry Gingery is up and about after twenty years abed, looking for time to finish twenty-eight quilts on which she worked—beside a number of other enterprises.

In 1916 Mrs. Gingery fell down her cellar steps, injured her back and was sent to bed. Then she had a stroke of paralysis.

But she decided she could not just lie there. So she sold magazines, painted greeting cards and calendars, made more than 1,000 artificial flowers, pieced fifteen quilts and cut material for the twenty-eight others.

Then, in the middle of 1936 medical skill worked a miracle for her. The first thing she wants to finish is those quilts.

Deafness May Be Due To Catarrh.

People should be taught to recognize the symptoms of catarrh, because here is one ailment which can do a lot of damage if treatment is neglected. Loss of taste and smell and a general, lazy, let-down feeling often result from neglect of this trouble. The hearing becomes impaired to such an extent that partial deafness may result. Too, catarrh causes head noises, a roaring, hissing in the ears; the ears have a full, stuffy feeling in the morning when you awake. All these symptoms should have immediate care.

For this purpose secure from your druggist a bottle of Parmint Concentrate (double strength) which is an old reliable English formula. One ounce of this concentrate will make 8 ounces of medicine by adding a little sugar and water.

Parmint Concentrate is a handy home treatment for those symptoms which lead to catarrhal deafness and head noises and should be used by everyone who is troubled this way. Any druggist can supply Parmint Concentrate and you can easily add water and sugar to make a big bottle of the medicine. It is an excellent preparation and is widely used by our English cousins. If you have the annoying symptoms of catarrh, don't run the risk of letting it become so deep seated that you may lose your hearing.

Ask Judicial Offices Be Filled With Care

Women's Council Exercised By Inadequate Sentences Meted Out to Criminals; Safer Driving Measures Also Considered at Meeting Yesterday

"Whereas the Chummy Club of the Metropolitan Church is anxious that the criminal laws of our country be administered in a manner which will insure to our citizens and their children the maximum protection intended by those laws,

"It is therefore resolved that all appointees to judicial positions and all others entrusted to prosecute offenders under the law be selected only after the most careful consideration as to their fitness and training for positions of such responsibility, so that the most competent and acceptable persons, irrespective of personal or political consideration, shall guard the public safety and preserve the peace of mind of our citizens."

INADEQUATE SENTENCES

This resolution was endorsed unanimously at the monthly meeting of the Local Council of Women yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Spofford, who presided, in supporting the resolution, reminded the members of certain miscarriages of justice which had taken place in Victoria and Vancouver during the last few years, in regard to the inadequate sentences meted out for criminal offences.

The resolution will be forwarded to the Federal Minister of Justice and the Attorney-General of B.C.

COMMEMORATIVE STAMP

The council also passed a resolution, sponsored by the sub-executive, asking the Federal government to mark the great services to Canada and the cause of humanity in general by Ishbel, Marchioness of Aberdeen and Temair, by issuing a stamp bearing her likeness in commemoration of the seventieth anniversary of Confederation. It was recalled that the United States had paid a similar tribute to Martha Washington and Susan B. Anthony, and the petition to the National Council, destined for the Ottawa government, noted this fact.

MOTOR ACCIDENTS

The increasing number of motor accidents, endangering life and limb, was referred to in two resolutions. One, from the Women's Auxiliary of Emmanuel Baptist Church that the Local Council here should request the National Council to take into consideration the advisability of appointing a standing or special committee for the purpose of instituting a programme of education for safety motor traffic, particularly among the youth of Canada, "the drivers of motors in the near future," and also to assist in securing such regulations as might promote safety in motor traffic.

The second resolution, from a W.C.T.U. union, asking that potential drivers, before receiving their licenses, be warned of the danger of taking a drink either before or during the driving of a car, will be referred to the various affiliated organizations for consideration.

NOMINATIONS

A communication from the provincial corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. W. Murray, noted the following nominations for provincial executive:

Provincial president, Mrs. C. C. Spofford, Victoria; vice-president, Mrs. Rex Eaton, Vancouver; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. W. Murray, New Westminster, and recording secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Carl Grossmith, Chilliwack.

The meeting endorsed the nomination of Mrs. Paul Smith, M.P.P., as provincial vice-president in the National Council.

Nominations for executive of the Victoria Local Council are, to date, as follows:

President, Dr. Olga Jardine; first vice-president, Mrs. J. W. Gibson; vice-presidents, Mrs. Alfred Carmichael, Mrs. Llewellyn Thomas, Mrs. D. L. MacLaurin, Miss Savory, Mrs. William McManus and Mrs. A. C. Ross; secretary, Mrs. A. E. Hopkins, and treasurer, Mrs. F. A. Fleming.

REPORTS LIMITED

The annual meeting of the council will be held on February 24 and 25, and the next monthly meeting on Monday, February 8. Mrs. Spofford reminded the members that reports of affiliated societies to be presented at the annual meeting must be cut to the bare facts and limited to three minutes each.

A letter of thanks was received from Mrs. R. B. McMicking thanking the executive for the lovely potted plant sent to her at Christmas. She has been a member of the council since 1896. The Edmonton Local Council wrote a warm letter introducing Mrs. E. L. Hill, who recently removed to Victoria, and who was a prominent worker in the prairie group for many years. Mrs. Hill, who was present with her daughter, Miss Hill, was warmly welcomed to the meeting.

The matter was referred to the two committees deputed by the national council to consider the education in safety programme advocated by Mrs. D. L. MacLaurin.

To Celebrate Her 104th Birthday

Ontario Woman Recalls Early Cannibalism

Canadian Press

La Salle, Ont., Jan. 12.—Mrs. Felice Meloche of this Essex County town will celebrate her one hundred and fourth birthday tomorrow by nibbling at a piece of cake and eating a large bowl of corn flakes and milk, but she can recall a distant day when her father had stronger fare—the cooked shoulder of an American woman.

It happened a hundred years ago. William Lyon MacKenzie's rebellion had thrown Canada into a state of civil war.

Her father, Basil Drouillard, came upon an Indian camp. The Indians greeted him courteously and served him a large piece of meat.

He was hungry and ate it. As he was licking his fingers of the last shreds of meat an old squaw grinned at him.

"Do you know what you were eating?" she asked. He admitted he didn't, but thought the taste a little unusual.

The squaw smiled again. "It was an American woman we caught and killed," she replied. Drouillard would not believe it, so the fat squaw padded off and returned in a moment, holding by the hair the head of a white woman.

WILL IS FOUND IN VANCOUVER

Alberta Document Made 17 Years Ago Reposed Unknown in Desk in David Spencer Ltd. Store

Canadian Press

Vancouver, Jan. 12.—A seventeen-year-old will drawn up by a Lethbridge, Alta., rancher, who died several years ago, was discovered in a second-hand desk in one of Vancouver's biggest stores on the day the rancher's widow died, ignorant of the will's contents.

The will was drawn in February, 1920, by James Harvey Wallace of Lethbridge, leaving his then substantial estate to his wife, Barbara Ellen Wallace. It voided a previous will.

Mr. Wallace died several years ago and the widow moved east. Last Saturday she died at Stanstead, Que. The same day the missing second will was found tacked to the back of a drawer in an old desk used by D. L. Loughman, advertising manager for David Spencer Ltd.

Mr. Loughman said the desk had been in his office for the past four years. After having stood in the used furniture department for several years. Its origin prior to that is unknown.

WILL MADE IN MONTANA

The will was drawn up at Havre, Mont., and named Mrs. Wallace, Francis Asbury Wallace of Gleichen, Alta., and Thomas Brown of Vancouver, as administrators.

The document named Mrs. Wallace as sole beneficiary of private property consisting of mortgages, livestock and cash and a half interest in J. H. Wallace and Company holdings, which included ranch lands, leases, cattle, improvements and accounts due in the Lethbridge district.

It was witnessed by E. C. Carruth, Havre, Mont., and Mrs. Mabel Wetherelt, whose address was not given.

The will was in an unstamped enveloped addressed to F. A. Wallace, care of a business block here, but the manager of the building declared there was no record of a tenant by that name and none is listed in the city directory.

Neither could Thomas Brown, named as one of the administrators be traced here.

VOID FORMER WILL

The concluding paragraph of the will read:

"My former will made in Lethbridge shall not in any way conflict with this, my last will, and any matter not clear or specified shall be left to the decision of the administrators named herein."

Her body was clad in underclothing and stockings. Over the cascading tub, her slayer had stretched a sheet.

Her husband, Frank, also twenty-five, an employee of the American Hotel Company, was the last known person to see her alive, Detective Inspector John J. Ryan of the Queens County Police, said.

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

HOLDING BREATH—TRACED TO BABY'S THYMUS GLAND.

Because this department is not a medical one, it hesitates to deal with those subjects upon which it can have only an informed lay person's knowledge. But when mothers write me—as they do often—about the baby's propensity to hold his breath, to faint and grow cold and limp after being hurt or frightened; when they describe the child's exhausted condition afterwards, I feel that it is criminal not to make them aware of the possible basis of such conduct.

Babies do not hold their breaths from anger alone, they may become breathless because they cannot help it. When this happens repeatedly it seems to me a mistake to try to keep on making explanations about the baby's temper.

The thymus gland, which is located in the upper chest, is a gland peculiarity of childhood. In fact it exists principally as an inhibitor of the development of the sex glands before such time as these should become active. The gland is largest in infancy and tends to grow smaller as the child nears adolescence. When it is too large it may press upon the respiratory organs, thus shutting off the child's wind and rendering him momentarily suffocated when for some reason he becomes excited and emotional. Doctors have expressed the belief that when babies are found dead in their cribs—with no evidence of disease — the thymus gland may be responsible.

When the baby loses his breath constantly and is faint and exhausted afterwards, it is a wise insurance against serious consequences to have an X-ray photograph made of the thymus gland. Then it is an equally simple matter to have its size reduced by X-ray treatments. I am hopeful that mothers who are slapping and punishing their breath-holding babies on the premise that they are exhibiting temper, will be warned that the baby has no control over his breathlessness.

Our leaflet on "How to Deal with Real Temper Tantrums" may be had for a self-addressed and three-cent stamped envelope sent to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, care of the Your Baby and Mine department of this newspaper.

Tomorrow: Do not rush baby's normal development.

Johannesburg (Canadian Press)—With a continued shortage of trained nurses in South Africa, several have arrived from England to take positions in hospitals in this district.

Sore Throat Pains DUE TO COLDS Eased Instantly

1. Crush and stir 3 "Aspirin" tablets in ½ glass of water.

2. GARGLE thoroughly — throw your head way back, allowing a little to trickle down your throat.

3. Repeat gargle and do not rinse mouth, allow gargle to remain on membranes of the throat for prolonged effect.

Just Gargle This Way with "ASPIRIN"

Here is the most amazing way to ease the pains of rawness of sore throat resulting from a cold we know you have ever tried.

Crush and dissolve three "ASPIRIN" tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back.

This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases almost instantly; rawness is relieved.

Countless thousands now use this way to ease sore throat. Your doctor, we are sure, will approve it. And you will say it is marvelous.

● "Aspirin" tablets are made in Canada. "Aspirin" is the registered trade-mark of the Bayer Company, Limited, of Windsor, Ontario. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every tablet.

Marrying Themselves

Only a few days after two New Yorkers were married by contract, Stockton White Woodruff and Miss Nancy Irvin McAfee escaped the usual nuptial pomp by marrying themselves without aid of a minister in the old Quaker tradition at Purchase, N.Y. The bridegroom is shown placing the ring on his bride's finger during the simple ceremony, at which each said the marriage vow in the presence of four official witnesses, just as Miss McAfee's great-grandmother had done more than 100 years ago.

Above is a "reconstruction" as made by a Seattle paper, of the note left by the outlaw who on December 27 kidnapped ten-year-old Charles Mattson. Following the finding of the body of the slain boy seven miles from Everett yesterday, the combined U.S. federal state and city police are engaged in a great hunt for the abductor and murderer. Alongside the clues found where the body lay is ranged the bandit's note, which demanded a ransom of $28,000—a sum which the father, Dr. W. W. Mattson, attempted unsuccessfully to pass over in exchange for the boy.

The gaiety of the Christmas party at "Thunder Mesa," the de Forest hacienda in New Mexico, has a tragic ending when PEARL SAM DE FOREST, oldest of three brothers, is found dead with a knife in his throat.

Each of the de Forest brothers has the first name "Pearl". As a family they cling to traditions, seldom see outsiders. PEARL JOHN is the youngest brother, PEARL PIERRE next. Others at the house are: TANTE JOSEPHINE, old and an invalid; BETTY WELCH, her young companion; RAMON VASQUEZ, and ANGELIQUE ABEYTA, guests at the party; PROFESSOR SHAW, archeologist, and BOB GRAHAM, tire salesman stopping at the hacienda until his car is repaired.

The body of Pearl Sam, placed in the house chapel, disappears. Bob hears Tante Josephine, in a hysterical outburst, accuse each of the remaining brothers of Pearl Sam's murder.

Radmen and Angelique see Pearl Pierre poking about the embers of the burned Christmas greens. Later they discover that the body of Pearl Sam has been burned.

Back at the hacienda, Angelique flirts with Pearl Pierre to see if she can learn from him anything about the murder. Next morning Pearl Pierre is missing. The house and grounds are searched and Pearl Pierre's body is found below a rocky ledge, the same knife that killed Pearl Sam in his throat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI

It was beyond doubt, another murder. Pearl Pierre had not slipped on the snow and fallen to his death. There had been a mysterious hand striking him down with the knife, then pitching him over the edge of the mesa.

Pearl John stared down at his brother's lifeless body.

Ramon Vasquez took off his overcoat and carefully covered the body, then motioned to the Indian and Bob to help carry it to the house. Betty slipped her arm into Pearl John's and the strange little procession started back across the snow. Not a word was spoken until they entered the patio. Then Pearl John seemed to have recovered enough to direct them to take the dead man to the chapel. This time, however, as they left the room he locked the door and put the key in his pocket.

"We don't want anything to happen as it did to Pearl Sam," he said. "I think we had all better go to the living-room now and see what we can find out."

As they walked to the front of the house, everyone was keenly conscious that each of the others was a potential murderer. This time there could be no doubt that the person who had committed the crime was on the mesa. The sinister knife had been on the premises, although everyone had supposed it had been put away in safe keeping. The crude, hand-chipped point of black, glass-like rock had struck twice at the household on Thunder Mesa. Would there be another victim? If so, who would it be?

* * *

As though he, too, had the same thought, Pearl John anounced, "I have decided to destroy the obsidian knife. It seems, still, to crave sacrificial blood and I'm going to pound it to powder."

Professor Shaw moved forward and looked down at Pearl John intently. "You can't do that, de Forest!" he protested, his voice shaking. "You'd be destroying one of the most valuable relics in this country. I beg you to sell it to the museum and let me take it away where it can be studied and preserved. Almost any price can be arranged. Don't act so hastily. It would set back the work of archeologists here in New Mexico immeasurably to destroy the knife. I hope, by means of it, to prove a contention I've been working on for years."

"As if the knife hasn't already played its part, as far as you are concerned, Professor," answered Pearl John icily.

"Now, de Forest, that's treating Professor Shaw pretty roughly, isn't it?" Ramon interceded. "We all understand what a blow you've just had, but, after all, you haven't a clear idea, yourself, what happened to the knife when your oldest brother's body disappeared, have you?"

Pearl John colored and, after a minute, he turned to the professor. "Forgive me, please. I shouldn't have said what I did. But—" his lips set hard, "I still am going to dispose of the knife. I shall never have a minute's peace until that is done."

Ramon laid a hand on his host's arm. "Listen, de Forest. I've an archeologic interest in the knife, too. Although I've never had the chance to examine it closely, from what the professor says it must be of more than ordinary value. I'd think twice before destroying it."

"So!" Pearl John did not say what was in his mind, but the manner in which he looked at the other man was eloquent. Ramon shrugged and turned away.

Pearl John went to the door and called a servant. "Tell Broken Shield to bring the heaviest sledge hammer from the shop here to me," he directed. "You may as well all see me do this," he added meaningly. "I think we'll all feel safer when we know the knife is no longer in existence."

* * *

Professor Shaw walked rapidly up and down the room while they waited, as though trying to think of some way to dissuade de Forest. Finally Bob said irritably, "For gosh sake, Professor, do you have to prance around like that? We're all on edge, you know."

"Pardon." The archeologist paused in the doorway. "I'll be in my room if you want me. I can't stay here and see this thing done. It's too outrageous, too preposterous!" He stamped off down the hall.

The Indian, coming to the door just then, distracted everyone's attention from the excited scientist.

"Stay here, Broken Shield," ordered Pearl John. "I'm going to see that the obsidian knife is destroyed and you may as well be the one to do it. I'd like you to know, too, that the knife is no longer available for use." His tone was biting as he looked at the man with a penetrating glance.

"You mean," began the Indian, "you want me break knife?"

"Pound it to powder, so we won't find it in someone else's throat," replied de Forest.

"No." The Indian drew himself up. "Sacred knife. Indian gods bring bad medicine to anyone who breaks knife."

De Forest shrugged disdainfully. "It's already brought plenty of bad medicine to two persons in this house. I'm going to see to it that hobody else goes to the Happy Hunting Grounds by its help."

Once more the Indian spoke earnestly, his dark face suddenly alight with feeling. Bob watched him, trying to fathom just what emotion was in his mind.

"Knife came from sacred kiva," Broken Shield said. "Very old—very strong medicine. Broken Shield not touch it to harm knife. The gods strike sure—pronto."

"There certainly seem to be a lot of people interested in keeping this cursed old thing in existence," remarked Pearl John sarcastically. "Perhaps, Broken Shield, you can tell us just how the knife disappeared after my oldest brother's death?"

"No," answered the Indian. "I not know. Not see until today."

"And it was in Pearl Pierre's throat when you got down there to his body on the rocks?" demanded Pearl John.

"Yes, I see it. It was in throat." The man motioned with one hand to his own neck.

"Um!" Pearl John took a turn about the room while the others watched him silently. "In his throat, eh?" He stopped opposite the Indian, his lips set in the thin line that Bob had noticed more than once.

"In his throat—" Pearl John repeated. "Just as it'll be in some other throat unless it is destroyed. There are entirely too many people who seem to have a reason for wishing that knife kept."

* * *

Ramon leaped to his feet in rage. "I resent that implication, de Forest," he roared. "Just because Professor Shaw and I see no reason for ruining a valuable artifact is no proof that we've been murdering your family. Since you've been so free to express your suspicions, let me remind you that, after all, you are the one here who really gains by the death of the older members of the family. As for him," pointing to the Indian, "the knife undoubtedly holds some religious significance."

Pearl John's face turned scarlet with fury. Then, with an effort he got control of himself and said in a quiet way, "We won't discuss this further, Vasquez. There's been too much blood spilled already. I am going to the chapel now and get the obsidian knife. If no one else will do it, I shall destroy it myself and take whatever curses heathen gods care to send upon my head."

He walked quickly to the door, where he turned. "I should prefer that you all wait here until I come back," he said and then disappeared.

"I feel as though I had a box seat at a blood-curdling mystery play," Bob said in a low tone to Betty, beside him.

"So do I," she answered. "It's as though we were waiting for the curtain to go up and show us how it all happened." She shivered and looked around.

Bob took her hand and held it fast, thinking as he looked down at the soft white fingers what it would mean to him if anything should happen to her. Then he felt those fingers grow tense. Pearl John was standing in the doorway and all eyes immediately turned to him.

"The chapel door was still locked," he said slowly, "but someone had removed the obsidian knife."

HOROSCOPE

"The stars incline, but do not compel"

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 13, 1937

Adverse stars rule after the morning of this day, which should be marked by careful procedure. It is a most unfavorable rule under which to make important decisions.

Good news of some sort should stimulate certain lines of business and there is a lucky sign for entering into contracts or soliciting leases.

Many parts of the country may face housing problems for rents will rise sharply and the high cost of food will drain the family budget.

Mars is in a sign read as indicating lack of diplomacy and inclination to take offence among persons and especially among government heads. Diplomacy may be futile while this sway continues.

The seers stress the need of clear thinking and the sort of logic that sees various points of view. Pursuit of selfish ends may have serious results.

Legislation that is unfortunate to many investors is forecast. Market fluctuations of far-reaching effect are presaged.

Extremes in human experience are prognosticated for this winter. Much happiness for the young is foreseen, while for the prosperous there will be varied pleasures. Extravagance in living will be indulged in by many.

Warning is given that disasters at sea and airplane accidents may be numerous and may cause heavy losses to the United States. High winds and heavy fogs will be unusually prevalent.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of extraordinary experiences. Sudden happenings are indicated, but haste should be avoided in all things.

Children born on this day probably will be exceedingly forceful and well-balanced. Subjects of this sign usually have unusual intellectual capacities.

Salmon P. Chase, jurist and statesman, was born on this day, 1808. Others who have celebrated it as a birthday include William Copley Winslow, archeologist, 1840, and Horatio Alger, writer, 1834.

CANADA RADIO FUTURE TOLD

Mrs. Nellie McClung Addresses Gyros on CBC Development Plans

A picture of radio as a shuttle to weave together the diverse elements of Canada's population and as the means through which the Dominion could serve as an interpreter in world relations, especially between Great Britain and the United States, was given to the Gyro Club at its luncheon yesterday by Mrs. Nellie McClung, member of the board of governors of the new Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Mrs. McClung declined to make any comment on the Victoria radio question because it had not as yet been fully discussed. On this subject she only said: "The local situation will be given every consideration, and all angles will be surveyed."

The speaker, who is known as an author, critic, educationist and feminist, spoke chiefly of the general aspect of Canada's radio future, and told a little of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's plans of development.

MUST BE GOOD

"Radio has to be good—or it will be a loss," she said. Without a proper Canadian broadcasting system and programmes with a Canadian individuality there was a danger of the younger people growing up in the belief that all good things came from the United States.

"Radio should interpret Vancouver Island to the rest of Canada, and the province of Quebec, for instance, to Vancouver Island," she said.

IN LONELY PLACES

Mrs. McClung spoke especially of the value of the radio to people in lonely places, telling from her own experiences of the long prairie nights and the loneliness of settlements cut off from the rest of the world.

"Neither fog, nor deep ruts, nor blinding snow can block the air against radio," she said.

The speaker reviewed briefly the manner in which the annual $2 license fees were spent, showing that the majority went to the leasing of telegraph wires, programme costs and the leasing of time on private stations.

She pointed out that Canadian listeners paid the lowest fees of any country where such fees were collected. British listeners paid $2.50 a year, Danish $5 and German $9.

The corporation's immediate plan was to erect large stations in Toronto and Montreal. The reason for this action, protested by her, was the need to collect money as soon as possible for development in the badly-served spots, notably British Columbia and the Maritimes. This development would take the form of building smaller relay stations.

Mrs. McClung paid a strong tribute to Major W. E. Gladstone Murray, general manager of the CBC, who will arrive in Victoria tomorrow.

The speaker was introduced by William Herbert and thanked by Angus McIntyre, president of the club.

The Family Doctor

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Most doctors now are convinced that gargling is not an accurate or efficient way to kill germs on the throat. Even an expert gargler will have trouble getting fluid far enough down to reach the irritated or infected spot. And the fluid is is not kept long enough in contact with the irritation or infection to do any good.

Dr. M. Fishbein

A gargle is essentially a wash. If it can reach the infectious material and flush it from the surface the material will be expelled when the gargle fluid leaves the mouth. A gargle also can relieve some of the dryness of the mouth or throat that is usually present with inflammation, and thus lessen the irritation.

If a gargle has a pleasant taste, it will have the advantage of substituting a nice taste for a bad one, but many a gargle solution makes a bad taste worse.

Since infectious material frequently has a bad odor as well as a bad taste, a gargle may be useful in substituting a pleasant for a bad odor temporarily. Again, however, the odor of many a gargle is worse than that which it is intended to replace. The primary purpose of any mouth or throat wash, therefore, is to cleanse and soothe.

A good cleansing mouth wash may be made by putting one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt in a half-glass of warm water. If there is much mucus and irritation, a quarter of a teaspoonful of ordinary baking soda or bicarbonate of soda may be used. This will help dissolve the mucus.

Most of the mouth washes and gargles sold in drug stores contain water, salt, baking soda, and boric acid, with flavoring and coloring of various kinds. Many of them contain small amounts of alcohol, since alcohol is an astringent substance which is cleansing and slightly antiseptic. Seldom is there more than one part of alcohol to four or five parts of water.

The mouth washes and gargles most commonly sold today are of two varieties, alkaline and acid antiseptics. They are solutions of the type mentioned, varying only in the fact that they occasionally contain small amounts of antiseptics, such as carbolic acid, and oils such as menthol, eucalyptus, or thymol.

Outstanding Tracksters To Perform In Local Indoor Meet

THE SPORTS MIRROR

By PETE SALLAWAY

TORCHY PEDEN should surpass the great six-day bicycle race achievements of Piet van Kempen in 1937 to become undisputed king of all the marathon jockeys of the iron steed. Peden launches the new year with twenty-six triumphs scrolled on the record books. The thirty-six-year-old Van Kempen has rolled home victorious in twenty-nine grinds.

* * *

Reggie McNamara, the old iron man of cycle racing, calls the Hollander the best all-round six-day biker of all time.

Van Kempen sprints and jams with the foremost. He knows his own distance and that of his adversaries, and his judgment of pace is so fine that he can beat accomplished opponents by a quarter of an inch. On top of it all, he is a polished showman.

* * *

Peden scarcely can miss becoming known as the daddy of all the six-day riders in history, however, and may gain the distinction this year. Peden has had ten years less experience than Van Kempen and yet is only three behind in total victories. In the matter of points scored throughout their careers, using the 5-3-2-1 system for first, second, third and fourth, the tabulation now stands: Van Kempen 207, Peden 192.

Van Kempen has finished second on thirteen occasions, third on eight and fourth on seven. Peden has fourteen seconds to his credit, five thirds and ten fourths.

It is Torchy's burning ambition to outstrip Piet, which is why he crams in so many six-day races.

* * *

Peden, standing 6 feet 3 inches and weighing 220 pounds, is the biggest competitive bike rider the game has known. He has an overabundance of energy and natural strength.

Van Kempen, standing 5 feet 8 inches and scaling 185 pounds, is a cagy general who wastes nothing. Every little movement has a meaning all its own. The Hollander conserves energy for strategic moments. He knows all there is to know about evading the pitfalls of being pocketed by jockeying riders, and other tricks of the trade resorted to when the boys seek to keep a dangerous threat in check.

* * *

Peden generally rides a 96-gear bike, changing to meet different situations. At times he uses a 100-gear wheel. Mighty few riders pedal 96-gear bikes, and then only because they best fit certain setups. The average racing bike is geared between 88 and 92. Van Kempen uses the 92 gear.

Peden's favorite bike has twenty-four teeth in the front sprocket, and seven in the rear. He travels 96 inches with every revolution of the front sprocket.

Torchy established the world record of 76½ miles an hour paced by an automobile over a measured mile on a Minneapolis highway in 1931. Another of his main ambitions is to attain 100 miles an hour, and bicycle men believe him equal to it. The blowing out of a rear tire at that speed would be dangerous enough, but if a front tire went it would be just too bad.

* * *

Van Kempen turned professional in 1919, and, starting from scratch, became the wealthiest rider in the business. He has accumulated a fortune of $500,000. A year ago, he told George Harvey, the promoter and old rider, that he had the equivalent of $300,000 in American money in a Holland bank.

Mrs. Van Kempen is a Belgian, which accounts for the champion now residing in Brussels.

In the final, Twite defeated Bayly, 15-6, 15-6.

Howie McPhee to Lead Formidable Varsity Outfit

Students Sending Over Strongest Squad in Years For Events January 22

Leading Local Athletes Ready

Some of the best track and field talent in Canada will take part in the fourth annual University of British Columbia - Victoria Y.M.C.A. indoor meet which will be held at the Bay Street Armories on January 22 under the auspices of the local association.

The annual series now stands at two victories to one in favor of the Thunderbirds and with the resumption of competition this month some of the keenest indoor track and field events ever witnessed by local fans are expected.

Negotiations with the Varsity team have almost been completed by Archie McKinnon, coach of the "Y" track and field squad, and the programme was satisfied by the local track committee's yesterday evening. Under the direction of Sam Clack, hard-working vice-president of the "Y" club, and Warren W. Martin, president, the committee consisting of Norval Peterson, Hal Beasley, Gert Wait and Archie McKinnon, have drawn up a fine list of events.

McPHEE COMING

A letter from F. J. Rita, manager of the U.B.C. track club, announces Varsity will probably bring across close to fifteen runners and field men. The Thunderbird squad will be built around Howie McPhee, Canadian Olympic sprinter; Paddy Colthurst, clever middle-distance man; Alev Lucas, sprinter and high jumper; Al McCoomber, half-miler; Lyle Wilson, sprinter, and Jim McCammon, handy shotputter.

On the opposing local squad will be Joe Addison, a serious threat in the middle-distance events and sprints; Bill Dale, Victoria's up-and-coming half-miler; Hugh Thomson from Nanaimo, who ranks on a par with Dale in the 880; George "Porky" Andrews, Art Chapman and Chuck Cunningham. The rest of the squad will be chosen from Owen Bentley, Harry Clark, Alec Gaunt, Elmo Geddes, Nelson Hepburn, Wilson Jobson, Gil Milnes, Jim Robinson, Henry "Hank" Rowe, Clarence Sluggett, Chuck Stevens, John Stewart, Bill Thompson and Bob Williams. Freddy Smith, young "Y" sprinter, is not expected to take part in the meet owing to an injured ankle sprained in the recent High School rugby series in Vancouver.

FEATURE EVENTS

The feature events in the inter-city part of the meet are expected to be the shuttle sprint relay, the forty-five-yard hurdles and the one-mile relay all of which proved to be upsets last year when the "Y" fliers breezed through in first place.

Several junior boys and women's track events have been added to the list to round out what shows promise of being an interesting programme.

The services of the Shrine band have been secured for the occasion while Adeline Grant and her troop of Highland dancers will offer a number of Scottish reels and sword-dances. Comedy has not been left out of the programme and will be presented in the form of the Y.M.C.A. senior leaders corps. The gymnastic aces from the "Y" under the leadership of Jack Allison will go through their bag of tricks in clown attire and with several new gags on their list, are expected to draw even more laughs than they did last year.

The complete list of events follows:

Shuttle sprint relay, 880 yards run, a 45 yards dash, shotput, 45 yards hurdles, 440 yards run, high jump, 220 yards dash, one-mile run and one-mile relay.

Four team relay for Y.M.C.A. Preps, six team relay for "Y" juniors, junior 45 yards dash, intermediate 110 yards dash, women's 45 yards dash, women's 110 yards dash and high jump.

Mid-Week Teams Meet Tomorrow

Teams in the Wednesday Football League will swing into action in the Pendray Cup series tomorrow afternoon when three games are carded. The cold weather last week caused postponement of the opening games. Kick-offs will be at 2.30 o'clock.

Spencers, present holders of the trophy, will meet the Victoria Longshoremen in the feature tilt at the Athletic Park. Dave McMillan will referee.

Navy ball kickers will be at home to the Hudson's Bay at the Admirals Road grounds, with Joe Obee as referee. At Heywood Avenue James Bay Wanderers will oppose the Garrison. Edgar Borde will referee.

LOUIS KNOCKS OUT ANOTHER

Finishes Off Frightened Stanley Ketchell in Second Round

Buffalo, N.Y., Jan. 12.—Joe Louis, Detroit, knocked out Stanley Ketchell, Bloomfield, N.J., in the second round of a scheduled four-round fight last night. Louis weighed 209½ and Ketchell 216.

The Brown Bomber nailed Ketchell just thirty-one and one-half seconds after the second round opened.

The knockout blow was a one-foot left jab to the chin delivered with such speed and force that the fans could hardly follow it. It was the only real punch of the fight.

Louis, greeted by a tremendous cheer from a crowd well over 5,000, made no real effort to hit Ketchell in the opener.

The fight began slowly, with Louis stepping calmly from his corner, while Ketchell, apparently the victim of a bad case of fright, rushed three-quarters of the way across the ring to meet him.

Louis toyed with the Bloomfield fighter throughout the first and Ketchell made no attempt to strike him.

After the second opened in the same fashion, Louis pushed Ketchell against the ropes and then whipped over the short, powerful jab. Ketchell struck the canvas with a thud that echoed throughout the jammed building and was out cold.

Men's Medal Play At Oak Bay Links

Dean Is At It Again

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Dizzy Dean dusted off his boss-baiting act again today.

"Ol' Diz" said he would welcome being traded off by the Cardinals, who haven't done right by "me or the St. Louis fans," and that he figured his services worth more than Babe Ruth ever got from New York Yankees.

"If the Cardinals did the right thing by me," he said, without the trace of a smile, "they'd pay me more than Babe Ruth got. Then the fans could brag St. Louis had the highest-priced ball player in history.

"And I would be tickled if they traded me," he continued. "You know, those Cardinals don't treat the fans square. They win a pennant and then break up their ball club. I'd like to play with any other club, and the club that got me would beat out the Cards."

He said he hadn't been offered a 1937 contract yet.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS

—By John Hix

UNRECOGNIZED GENIUS

Almost barbaric in their display of intense emotion, the paintings of Vincent Van Gogh were cosidered ridiculous by the critics and art patrons of his day. Only his brother had faith in his work and it was he who made it financially possible for the artist to carry on.

Born in Holland, 1853, Van Gogh first turned to religion as a vocation, then gave it up to spend the rest of his tragic life in painting. Hardly himself believing his work was of value, laughed at by the art world, he still stuck to his technique, casting out science and realism in his art for color and emotion.

When he ended his own life with a bullet fired into his brain, he had sold only one painting—for the sum of $129. Today art collectors fight for his works. One of his paintings recently sold for $85,000. The value of his existing paintings total about $10,000,000!

FIELD GOAL RECORD

Playing rugby as a freshman at Exeter High School, California, in 1912, Al Griggs developed into the most skillful kicker in his league.

Griggs was never taught to drop-kick, according to Walter M. Smith, principal of the school. He was simply handed the ball, shown the goal post, and told to see what he could do. That he did rather well is shown in his record in a game against Hanford High, November 6, 1915. Strange as it seems, he actually scored fifteen field goals—an all-time interscholastic record!

PERSIAN RUGS

The laborious process of making Persian rugs is accomplished by catching up yarn, winding it around "warp threads," tying it tightly, and leaving the short ends protruding. More Sehna knots, used in Persian rugs, can be tied to the square inch than Ghiordes (Turkish knots). The finest of Persian rugs have as many as 700 knots to the square inch.

Harry Cooper Wins With Record Score

Smashes Tournament Record With 72-hole Score of 274 to Win Los Angeles Open Golf; Horton Smith and Ralph Guldahl Tie For Second

Los Angeles, Jan. 12.—Tucking away the biggest cash prize of the West Coast winter campaign, $2,500, Harry Cooper, Chicago winner of the twelfth annual Los Angeles open golf tournament, led a contingent of the nation's best golfers toward northern California today.

Cooper, with the runners-up in the Los Angeles meet, Horton Smith, Chicago, and Ralph Guldahl, St. Louis, and the rest of the nomadic golfing brigade, will play in the $5,000 Oakland open starting Friday.

Cooper's victory here at the end of the seventy-two holes of steady play was impressive. Trailing by one stroke at the turn yesterday to Guldahl, and tied with Smith, "Light Horse Harry" blazed down the last nine to shatter par by five strokes for an eighteen-hole score of 67.

In addition, he lowered the tournament record of 279, which he set twelve years ago, to 274.

Thirty-five players shared in the $8,000 purse posted here.

Smith and Guldahl split second and third place money with their 279's and received $1,250 apiece.

JAMES BAY TEAM

The line-up of the James Bay Wanderers for their Wednesday Football League match tomorrow follows: C. Sadler, Knapp, Coates, R. White, W. Sadler, D. White, Geoghan, Ball, Clancy, Davidson, L. Gelling and W. Gelling.

Di Maggio Wants $25,000 Salary

San Francisco, Jan. 22.—Joe Di Maggio, who was the American League's prize rookie last season, is going to ask Col. Jacob Ruppert for $25,000 to play ball with the New York Yankees this season.

"If Lou Gehrig is worth $31,000, then I guess I ought to be worth about $25,000," the twenty-two-year-old North Beach Italian declared.

"I'm going to ask for it, anyway."

M.C.C. Gets Draw In One-day Match

Launceston, Tasmania, Jan. 12.—The touring Marylebone Cricket Club team and a Tasmanian eleven played a drawn one-day match today. The tourists obtained 250 runs against 145 for five wickets by the Antipodeans.

BOXING

Buffalo—Joe Louis, 209½, Detroit, knocked out Stanley Ketchell, 215, Bloomfield, N.J., two.

New Orleans—Jack Torrence 205½, New Orleans, knocked out John Saxon, 205¾, Beaumont, Texas, one.

Baltimore—Howard Scott, 134½, knocked out Eddie Zivic, 132¾, Pittsburgh, two.

Louisville—Freddie Miller, 128, Cincinnati, outpointed Jimmy Vaughan 134½, Cleveland, ten.

New York—Paulie Walker, 150¼, Trenton, N.J., outpointed Joe Pennino, 146, Brooklyn, eight.

INTERIOR FIVE BEAT ADANACS

Touring New Westminster Basketballers Are Defeated 39 to 36

Penticton, Jan. 12.—Penticton-Summerland hoopsters went on a shooting rampage last night to hand the touring New Westminster Adanacs their first tour setback, 39 to 36. The interior boys jumped into an early lead and held a comfortable margin throughout the first half, which finished 22 to 13.

Ross Helem for Adanacs found the range in the second period and the teams battled basket for basket till the last few minutes when Adanacs, with a closing rush, and aided by some careless local passing, narrowed the gap to three points.

Jim Tostenson, Kelowna, subbed for the injured Dave Neill and clicked a useful eight points. Helem was high with thirteen for Adanacs and MacDougall with a nice display of flying push shots notched thirteen for Penticton-Summerland.

Adanacs—Helem (13), Kennington (8), Forrest (2), J. Tostenson (8), Kidd (5); 36 points.

Penticton - Summerland — J. Gibbs (7), Ewart, Bennest (8), Wilson (2), Blacklock (5), MacDougall (13), Thorpe (4), R. Gibbs; 39 points.

Referees—Gartrell and Rudd.

Windsor Series Is On

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 12.—Windsor Fords, 1936 Dominion basketball champions and Canada's representatives at the Olympics, will meet their Berlin conquerors, the Los Angeles Universals, in a best-of-three game series here February 20, 22 and 23 for the world's amateur championship. The teams will play also for the Jacob France Trophy, emblematic of international championship.

Universals, playing a series of games in California this winter with five of their Olympic team on the roster, have been declared eligible to represent the United States against Fords in the trophy series.

The Los Angeles team defeated Fords 19 to 8 in Berlin to win the Olympic title after both teams advanced fairly easily to the final round.

Neither team is to use other than regular players in the title series.

Lynn Patrick Out With Injured Knee

Postpone Coast Hockey Fixture

Vancouver, Jan. 12. — Delayed train schedules caused postponement of the Vancouver-Oakland Pacific Coast Hockey League game here last night. The game will be played tonight instead.

Both teams were en route here from Oakland where the Lions downed the California squad 5 to 2 Saturday night. The Vancouver squad arrived yesterday afternoon by automobile but the Clippers, who traveled by rail, were too late getting into Seattle to make bus connections for the remainder of the trip.

Wrenched Member Will Keep Star Winger of New York Rangers Hockey Team on Sidelines For Ten Days; Three N.H.L. Games Tonight

Canadian Press

New York, Jan. 12.—A severely wrenched knee suffered in the game against New York Americans last Tuesday and aggravated in the match with Montreal Maroons Saturday night has put Lynn Patrick, flashy wingman of New York Rangers, on the shelf for at least ten days physicians said today.

The type of injury is particularly exasperating to the big, blond son of General Manager Lester Patrick. Not only is it the first leg handicap he has suffered since jumping to the National Hockey League from Montreal Royals three years ago but it is also the first time he has been unable to skate since turning pro and gliding about the frozen surface learning the fadeway shift of Francis Boucher, the pivoting of Cecil Dillon and sharpshooting of Butch Keeling.

Young Patrick was a crude skater when New York first got a look at him in Rangers' Broadway blue. He had had only one season with Royals after coming east from Victoria, B.C., where he was unable to find ice to skate on during four years. Patrick skated at every opportunity. He has spent upward of 500 hours skating in an effort to correct his lack of speed and poise.

GAMES TONIGHT

There should be a pretty hockey picture in Montreal tonight if the coaches co-operate and toss the star lines of Detroit Red Wings and Montreal Canadiens on the ice to oppose each other.

Imagine Larry Aurie, Marty Barry and Herb Lewis, the world champions' great line, in a passing duel with the Habitant veterans, Howie Morenz Aurel Joliat and Johnny Gagnon. The prospect should fill the Forum as it hasn't been filled before this season.

With sixty-five points the Aurie-Lewis-Barry trio are leading the league's scoring lines and you will get little argument from anyone that they are not the best attacking division in the game at the moment.

But the Canadien oldsters have compiled a record that is truly unusual and many consider their backchecking makes them more valuable than the Red Wing line. Morenz, Joliat and Gagnon have fifty-three points.

The happy Habitants are a game up on Wings. Each team has won a home game besides a Habitant win in Detroit.

Montreal Maroons play Americans at New York and Chicago Black Hawks meet Bruins at Boston in the other games tonight. None of the contests can make a change in the standings.

Sportsmen To Wear Emblems

Victoria and District Fish and Game Assn. Adopts Official Badge

Attractive red, white and blue felt-cloth circular badges will decorate the fishing and hunting jackets of members of the Victoria and District Fish and Game Association in future, the executive of that organization decided yesterday evening at a meeting in the Pacific Club.

Major Roger Monteith was in the chair.

The emblems which are about three inches in diameter bear the name of the association and in its centre is the head of a stag, a game bird and a fish. They will be numbered to correspond with those on members' membership tickets.

Members felt that a badge of this sort would aid toward strengthening the bond of friendship among members when they meet in the field, stream or wood and will also lend toward a spirit of closer co-operation between the farmer and the sportsman.

Roger Monteith, Joe Jewkes and Jack King will compose a committee to look into sport fishing conditions covering the Victoria and district area. They will secure actual data as to where improvement is needed. Their report will be forwarded to the three-man committee, which has been authorized to probe sport fishing activities in British Columbia.

DUCK SITUATION

Major Monteith informed the meeting he had sent a telegram on behalf of the Affiliated Fish and Game Association of Vancouver Island, of which he is president, to Inspector J. G. Cunningham, who is in Ottawa at present attending a migratory birds conference, to present the island appeal regarding ducks.

The telegram read: "Island sportsmen strongly urge duck season open November 1 to January 15, also evening flight shooting." Monteith sent the wire following a request from the Duncan Club, who reported they had already enlisted the support of the Nanaimo organization.

In reviewing the good work George Leckie Ewing, fisheries guardian, has accomplished in Goldstream, members were unanimous in their decision to write the Fisheries Department requesting that Mr. Ewing be placed on permanent work of a constructive nature throughout the year. They pointed out that there were other rivers and streams that needed such attention as Mr. Ewing has administered at Goldstream.

The executive decided to carry on with plans to fit in with the Forestry Department's single unemployed men's works programme on the island which is in full swing now.

Concrete facts on what is needed to be done that will be of mutual benefit to the public will be secured. E. L. Tait will investigate the West Coast and Cowichan districts to try and find out what is available in the way of crown lands that could be set aside for public use, without the danger of private interests purchasing them.

Kennel Club To Stage Show Soon

The Victoria City Kennel Club will stage a children's show on the afternoon of January 23, for which a number of interesting features have been arranged.

In the evening a regular parlor show will be held, judging to commence at 7.30 o'clock. The club has secured the services of George Pearson, Vancouver, as judge. Pearson has judged a number of championship shows in Canada and the United States.

The following classes have been arranged for all breeds and will be divided by sex: Junior puppy from three months and under six months; senior puppy from six months and under twelve months; novice for dogs never having won a first prize, and open class for which any dog of any age may enter. Champions are barred from all above classes. Further details may be obtained by phoning G4978 or E2536.

Hagen-Kirkwood On World Tour

New York, Jan. 12.—Two of golf's strangest human contrasts—Walter Hagen and Joe Kirkwood—rode the high seas today, embarked on an argosy that is a cinch to produce more laughs and sighs than the funniest pie-tossing comedy ever filmed.

Hagen, the magnificent spender of golf, and Kirkwood, one of the most artful savers of the professional shotmakers, are touring the world.

Detroit, Jan. 12.—Promoter Jack Kearns announced last night that Al Manfredo, San Francisco welterweight, has agreed to meet Champion Barney Ross in an overweight ten-round bout here January 29.

Aurie Still Sets Ice Scoring Pace

Detroit Forward Tops National Hockey League Sharpshooters With Twenty-three Points; Marty Barry, Teammate, Second, One Point Less

Montreal, Jan. 12.—Detroit Red Wings just about take over a monopoly on National Hockey League honors for the week that ended Sunday night.

Not only did the champions step into sole possession of first place in their division, but last night's official league scoring statistics show Wings' Larry Aurie still out in front of the individual point-getters with twenty-three and his line-mate, Marty Barty, just a point behind in second place.

More than that, Aurie is the league's top goal-getter with thirteen scores to his credit, and Barry is the high-ranking man in assists, having helped out on sixteen goals. And to top it off, the Detroit team is tops in game points with thirty, two up on the leading Montreal Canadiens of the Canadian group.

In fact, there's nothing left to the other teams but penalty "honors," which go to Allan Shields, of the New York Americans, who has spent sixty-three minutes in the penalty box.

In scoring points, Johnny Gagnon of Canadiens and Sweeney Schriner of Amerks are in a tie for third place with twenty-one. Gagnon's twelve-goal scores ties him for second in this division with Herb Lewis, third man of the high-scoring Detroit trio.

PRELIM BOUTS ARE ARRANGED

Two Six-rounders Will Support Townsend-Lee Bout Here January 21

Supporting the Billy Townsend-Billy Lee ten-round bout at the Tillicum gym on January 21 will be two fine six-round encounters.

Harry Miller, Port Alberni, will return here again to engage in a six-round go with Tim Keist, Victoria scrapper who will be attempting a comeback. In the second six-rounder Ray Luscombe, Victoria, and formerly of Vancouver, has been matched with Frenchy Beaudin Edmonton.

Beaudin is the chap who has taken a pair of decisions from Miller. A shifty lad with a great left hand he should provide lots of competition for Luscombe, who is a newcomer to the local ring.

The remainder of the preliminary bouts will be announced later.

BODY IDENTIFIED

Vancouver, Jan. 12 (Canadian Press) City police announced yesterday evening the body of a man found in the waters of English Bay near Siwash Rock last Thursday had been identified as that of Charles Crook, who was reported missing from his downtown residence December 5, 1936.

Torrance Scores Second Knockout

New Orleans, Jan. 12.—"Baby Jack" Torrance, world shotput record holder, knocked out Johnny Saxon, Beaumont, Texas, heavyweight, in the first round of their scheduled ten-round bout last night. It was Torrance's second knockout victory in as many starts as a professional boxer.

CANADA STILL GREAT MARKET

Will Produce Hockey Players For World For Many Years, Says Ottawan

New York, Jan. 12.—Fears held by some hockey-minded people that Great Britain and Europe will drain all the first-class puck chasers from Canada are considered groundless by Dinny Manners, veteran Ottawa mentor, now guiding Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets through the rugged schedule of the United States Eastern Amateur League.

Before departing for Atlantic City today he laughed at the suggestion Canada's production of talent is falling off, coincident with the large export south of the border and across the Atlantic.

"I don't believe that at all," he said. "After our playoffs were over last season I traveled extensively in Canada and found the supply of top-notchers plentiful.

"For pre-season training this season I had twenty-five players in my camp. I think Canada is able and is going to supply the world with hockey players for a long time to come."

Manners seems partial to Ontario puckmen. Of the seven newcomers this season, five are from that province. A majority of the holdovers, too, are from Ontario.

He is unusually enthusiastic about the future of Gus Geisebrecht, eighteen-year-old centre from Pembroke, and Colin Sherwood, right winger from Ottawa. The latter is a twin brother of Red Sherwood of the Jackets, the league's leading marksman.

Great Defence Fund in Russia

Central Executive Committee Has Plans Totaling $4,020,400,000

Associated Press

Moscow, Jan. 12. — Soviet Russia has answered talk of war with a $4,000,000,000 war chest.

In the presence of Joseph Stalin and others high in the councils of Bolshevism, Finance Commissar Gregory Grinko yesterday announced to the Central Executive Committee contemplated defence expenditures of 20,102,000,000 rubles.

That vast total, amounting to $4,020,400,000 at the official rate of five rubles to the dollar, is 35.7 per cent greater than last year's expenditures. It is about 20 per cent of the whole budget of 97,000,000,000 rubles (more than $19,000,000,000.

PLANES AND WARSHIPS

The Soviets are expected to use the money to increase the Red army, to swell the air force, and to build a great fleet. Diplomats calculate the 1937 war estimates amounted to 587 rubles ($117) for each Russian family of five persons.

In the 1936 military budget was 14,815,000,000 rubles ($2,963,000,000).

Grinko said the 1937 budget of state, while set at 97,000,000,000 rubles, might approximate 103,000,000,000 rubles because of other expenditures. That would be an 18.5 per cent increase over last year.

The budget increases, said Grinko, were made possible by increased production and trade turnover in the past year—due largely to the Stakhanovite movement for greater work results.

Search For Aged Man in Ontario

Canadian Press

Owen Sound, Ont., Jan. 12.—Searchers today plodded through the bush country in the Hepworth district hunting for seventy-two-year-old Herman Ride, missing for a week. Hepworth is about ten miles west of here. It was feared the old man might have become sick while in the bush.

Court Warning To Reckless Drivers

Canadian Press

Toronto, Jan. 12.—Hope that cases of motor manslaughter would not be considered as different in principle from other types of manslaughter was expressed by Chief Justice H. E. Rose in his address yesterday to the jurors at the opening of the Toronto winter assizes.

"Careless driving will stop as soon as the people of Ontario realize it has got to stop," he declared. "We have lots of legislation. We need enforcement."

Alderman Loses Seat in Calgary

Canadian Press

Calgary, Jan. 12.—A city contract, for which he received $66 a year, cost Alderman A. C. Rowe, Social Credit member of the Calgary council his seat and the $500 yearly stipend that goes with it.

Finding the alderman was ineligible to hold office because at the time, of his election he was interested in a contract with the city, Mr. Justice W. C. Ives, in Supreme Court chambers, late yesterday declared the seat vacant and ordered a by-election.

Operator of a comptometer and calculating machine repair shop, Mr. Rowe had a contract to service civic office machines for which he was paid an annual fee of $66. He has had the contract since 1931.

Indian Boy Is Killed By Dogs

Canadian Press

Edmonton, Jan. 12.—Killing of a six-year-old Indian boy at the Hay River Anglican Church mission by six sleigh dogs which tore the child to pieces before mission workers could beat them off was reported here yesterday by Pilot Arthur Rankin on his arrival from the north. The mission is about 750 air miles north of Edmonton.

"The dogs ripped him to ribbons," the aviator said, adding all six animals were shot soon after the boy had been killed last Thursday. He did not know the name of the Indian boy.

M'LARNIN MAY FIGHT STEELE

Plans Announced For Holding Title Match on the Pacific Coast

New York, Jan 12.—If present plans go through, the Pacific Coast soon may see Freddie Steele, the middleweight boxing champion, defending his title against Vancouver's Jimmy McLarnin, former king of the welters.

Dave Miller, Steele's manager, is anxious to make the match and stage it either in Seattle, Los Angeles or San Francisco. He will go into a huddle with McLarnin's mentor, Pop Foster, when the Steele entourage, now in New York, returns home to Tacoma.

"It looks like the best money match in sight for Freddie," Miller said today. "It will be natural anywhere on the coast. Freddie is a favorite out there and so is Jimmy.

"McLarnin will have a chance to win himself another title and he won't have to give away more than six or seven pounds in weight. Freddie can get down to 154 and Jimmy can easily build up to 147 or 148."

SEE JOHNSTON

Steele and Miller called on James J. Johnston at Madison Square Garden to discuss a return bout with Eddie "Babe" Risko of Syracuse, in the Garden in February.

No agreement was reached, but another conference was scheduled for today. Both Johnston and Miller think they will do business.

If the match is made Steele, paying his first visit to the big town, will remain over for the Joe Louis-Bob Pastor fight, January 29. Otherwise he'll head for home late this week.

Vancouver, Jan. 12.—Although declaring plans to match him with middleweight champion Freddie Steele somewhere along the Pacific Coast was news to him, Vancouver Jimmy McLarnin, former world welterweight champ, last night admitted it at least was "an idea."

"I haven't heard a thing about such a match," Jimmy said, "but it is an idea—isn't it."

Manager Pop Foster, who was more liable to know about such things, said the Vancouver Celt was at present in Los Angeles.

Jimmy revealed he is leaving for Los Angeles in "a couple of days" to get in shape "for anything that looks promising."

New Work Plan For Relief Men

Vancouver Council Will Lay Proposal Before B.C. Government

Vancouver, Jan. 12.—A new relief plan for Vancouver, by which 3,000 married men now receiving relief would be absorbed in a civic public works programme at an increased cost to the city of $173,310, was endorsed by the city council yesterday.

Alderman R. P. Pettipiece, sponsor of the scheme, was given authority to select a committee to interview provincial government officials. Adoption of the scheme would entail an estimated expense of $986,688 to the government. Total cost of the plan would be $1,453,840, according to Relief Officer R. W. Bone.

Alderman Pettipiece said he was "privately advised the city would get a sympathetic hearing at Victoria."

COMPULSORY PLAN

Under the proposed scheme, work would be compulsory for all physically fit men. They would be given work at wages of $4 a day for sufficient days each month to give them a larger amount than they now receive through relief. Recipients would be free to do any additional work they could find without prejudice in their civic labor.

The suggested scale would range from eight days' work at $32 a month for a man with one dependent to sixteen days' work and $64 a month for a man with eight dependents.

Mayor G. C. Miller will accompany the city's delegation to Victoria.

Search of Police For Body Fails

Vancouver, Jan. 12.—Police yesterday evening conducted an unsuccessful search of the waters of False Creek for the body of a man believed drowned after a leap from the Burrard Bridge.

An overcoat, found hanging on the rail of the bridge by a pedestrian, led police to drag the waters.

The reeve and councillors of Esquimalt will give an account of their actions during the last year at the annual meeting to be held in the municipal hall on the evening of Thursday, December 21, it was announced at last night's session of the municipal council.

A request for federal grants to compensate the municipality of Esquimalt for the extent of government-owned tax-free property within its borders has been forwarded to Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of National Defence, in anticipation of the opening of the Dominion Parliament next week, Reeve Alexander Lockley informed the Esquimalt Council last night. The request was also forwarded to the Union of Canadian Municipalities and endorsed by Reeve William Crouch of Saanich, regional representative of the union.

Definite Turn to Prosperity

The Canadian Bank of Commerce Report at Annual Meeting Encourages High Hopes

After presenting the strong Statement of the Bank for the fiscal year ending 30th November, 1936, the General Manager, Mr. S. H. Logan, said in part:

The inauguration by the Bank of Personal Loan Departments has already been mentioned in the Directors' Report. I might add that every one of our branches in Canada is now equipped to make these loans to people with small but steady incomes who find themselves in temporary need of financial help.

The plan is one which enables the wage earner to cope with emergencies, to make expenditures of advantage to himself and his family, or, by consolidating debts already incurred, to ease the pressure upon him by permitting their payment under a budgetary plan.

You may be interested in some information from the latest annual return to the Government which classifies our loans in Canada by the borrowers' occupations.

The largest single occupational group, out of a total of 81,000 borrowers, consists of some 29,800 customers engaged directly in agriculture. Loans to sundry individuals not specifically classified by occupation numbered 35,700. As regards the distribution in amount of total loans, agricultural loans, including the financing of grain from the farm to the export market, accounted for 21 per cent., manufacturers and other producers took 18 per cent., while wholesalers and retailers absorbed 7 per cent. Private individuals borrowed 15 per cent., governments and municipalities 14 per cent., brokers and bond dealers 13 per cent., while construction, because of its low ebb, accounted for only 3 per cent. It is interesting to observe how closely these percentages compare with those of the last Dominion census classifying gainfully employed Canadians by the occupations which they followed.

These figures indicate how wide and varied is the field served by the Canadian banking system, and how large is the number of borrowers who rely on the aid of bank loans in the conduct of their affairs.

There are men, of whom a few are in positions of responsibility, who decry our banking system as a mechanism which, for the benefit of bankers alone, enslaves the people by forcing upon them an ever-increasing burden of debt from which they can never hope to escape. To this cause, they claim, can be attributed all hardship and poverty and they urge, therefore, that the system should be changed.

Loans are, however, never forced by the banks on unwilling borrowers, but are sought by borrowers in the expectation that borrowing will be to their advantage. Unless the banker, on examination of the facts, agrees that such expectations are reasonable he is most likely to deny the applicant's request and will at least attempt to dissuade him from the venture. Since borrowers take the initiative in obtaining loans it is absurd to say that the banks force debt upon them.

IMPRESSIVE BUSINESS GAINS

Our domestic situation is one which encourages optimism.

The signs of business improvement for some time evident in Canada are, at least in the more thickly settled areas, becoming much more pronounced. This improvement is especially remarkable because it has developed, and is sustained, in the face of many adverse conditions.

Total agricultural income is estimated to have risen by 15 per cent. and to have brought farm purchasing power close to the level of 1930.

Our satisfaction over these surprising good results in a year when agriculture faced immense handicaps must, however, be tempered by a realization that many farmers in the worst drought areas did not share in these higher returns.

With few exceptions our industries have operated at a normal rate of activity. Virtually all of our modern manufacturing facilities in the forestry branch have been utilized in providing about 40 per cent. of the world's requirements of newsprint paper and at least 15 per cent. of the world trade in lumber. During recent months, moreover, logging activity was more than one-third greater than in the like period in 1935, which foreshadows an even higher production for newsprint paper and lumber mills in the current year.

The heavy, or capital goods, industries have surged forward at a pace beyond expectation. Notwithstanding the slow recovery of construction, a large and representative group of the heavy industries, whose production records are available to the Bank, are now operating at an average rate 50 per cent. greater than two years ago. I suggest that the revival in this particular line is one of the brightest features in our general economic situation. The re-employment of a host of trained workmen, whose skill was being impaired by idleness, removes a very real threat of a loss to Canada in industrial efficiency. It indicates also that other branches of manufacture are commencing to bring idle capital into use to provide replacement of obsolete equipment.

In 1936 our production of minerals was valued at $360,000,000, the largest amount on record for Canada. With the exception of the return paid on foreign capital employed, and the cost of equipment unobtainable in this country, virtually all of this sum has been, or is being, disbursed in Canada to pay for labour, supplies, transportation and other services, and as dividends to Canadian investors.

These immediate advantages, and those derived from the firm resistance offered by our mining activities to the effects of the depression, are generally recognized and appreciated. There are others which may be overlooked, although of equal or greater importance, but which must eventually come to a country so richly endowed with minerals as Canada.

Sources of energy and metals conveniently at hand have played an important part in industrial growth the world over.

We have developed metallurgical units which rank among the most important in the world, and we are now smelting and refining a large proportion of the metals we have for sale abroad. Thus we have laid the foundation for establishing a great industrial structure based upon our mineral resources and their conversion in Canada into manufactured goods for home and foreign consumption.

EXPORT TRADE REACHED BILLION MARK

We have every reason to congratulate ourselves on the record of our general export trade. We reached the billion dollar mark for the first time since 1929, when exports stood at $1,200,000,00.

This achievement is the more remarkable because the general price level in that interval has fallen by 22 per cent. If, therefore, our present volume of export trade were calculated in terms of 1929 values the result would exceed the total of that year by about $80,000,000. It is, moreover, doubtful whether at any time the benefits of our export trade have been so well distributed among Canada's various industries as in 1936.

When we compare the results in Canadian export trade with those achieved by other countries our good fortune is emphasized, for I find that the rate of increase in the average monthly gold value of our exports during the first ten months of 1936 over 1935 was not only triple the rate of increase of the world as a whole, but was also greater than that of any other major exporting country.

Canada improved its position among the world's exporters by drawing ahead of France into fourth place, and by further widening the margin between its level of export trade and that of Japan, which continues to occupy sixth place.

As was to be expected, the striking increase in exports stimulated our demand for imports, which rose by over 10 per cent. The final result was a margin of exports over imports in excess of $350,000,000, and thus we had to our credit the third largest merchandise trade balance this country has enjoyed in the post-war period.

The hazards and hardships of pioneering in a new country would have overwhelmed our forefathers had they not possessed vision, energy and courage. I believe that these qualities still survive in our people, that they will enable us to solve the problems which now confront us and so to develop our heritage that we shall ensure an enviable future for Canada.

Sir John Aird, the President, said in part:

Canada's present economic condition approaches prosperity.

In fact, a healthy prosperity of the 1925-27 order actually exists in many sections of the country, notably over most of our vast mining domain, in areas of good crop yields such as the Maritime Provinces and extensive sections of Quebec and Eastern and Western Ontario, as well as in important lumbering districts, such as the Pacific Coast, where production has been greatly expanded.

Taking the Prairie Provinces as a whole a substantial improvement is shown during the year, the advance being quite marked in those areas where good crops were harvested. Although the total figures for the wheat crop were below the small yield of 1935 the grade was exceptionally high. With the very welcome improvement in price which came last year the effect has been to raise the value of all grain production to at least 250 million dollars, fully 30 millions in excess of that of 1935.

REQUISITES FOR FURTHER PROGRESS

Where prosperity still lags it can be stimulated by a further development of natural forces of recovery, by normal crop conditions this year, by a practical policy of grain marketing, by necessary reconstruction measures in the West, by strict observance of the principles of good credit and by more determined efforts to balance our public budgets.

These are the requisite factors applicable to any section of Canada that desires to share fully in a general advance which may be of such dimensions as to surprise the most optimistic. Indeed, the question today appears to be not whether the present business revival will continue, but firstly, whether the prospective development of business can be prevented from assuming boom proportions with consequent over-speculation in the stock market and over-investment in industry; and, secondly, whether rearmament, which now induces a feverish demand for certain materials, can be replaced by constructive and more desirable enterprise.

I shall not qualify my former expressions against excessive trade restrictions because of their depressing effect upon business. But now I urge world-wide tariff revision for two other reasons, namely, to protect the consuming masses against possible sharp increases in living costs, and to prevent the large governmental expenditures still necessary for public relief from mounting so high as to nullify efforts to achieve budgetary balance.

The tripartite monetary agreement announced by Great Britain, France and the United States last September denounced, in effect, competitive currency depreciation, and in a sense renounced the system of national currency management which had formerly been in vogue. But it is nevertheless highly gratifying that there is now at least a semblance of monetary unity and that business transactions are less hazardous than when the exchanges were continuously subject to wide fluctuations.

PROBLEM OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Canada's most urgent national problem is that of unemployment which, notwithstanding the marked improvement in our domestic business and foreign trade persists in undiminished degree in the Dominion as a whole, although showing recession in several Provinces. Before the problem can be dealt with intelligently we must have detailed information concerning the entire body of the unemployed with a complete classification according to their individual trades or callings and aptitude, having regard to age and state of health, for absorption into the nation's industrial life.

Once an authoritative survey is made as to the classes of the unemployed and their distribution throughout the Dominion, Governmental policies can be intelligently directed toward meeting the situation by public works or otherwise, as may be deemed most expedient. Stability of currency is essential to the revival of private constructional or durable enterprises which furnish so much and so productive employment. Such enterprises are financed by the issue of long-term securities to the investing public. As long as national budgets remain unbalanced, with accompanying currency or credit inflation, uncertainty is bound to persist concerning the future value of the monetary unit.

It should be recognized that the present alignment of the world wheat supply in relation to demand is due more to exceptional crop damage over a large area than to increased consumption. Since 1932 the annual requirements of wheat importing countries from the major exporting group, including Canada, have averaged about 500 million bushels, as compared with the previous 5-year average of 760 millions, owing mainly to the desire of these importers to make themselves as independent as possible of overseas wheat. Yet there is a clearly discernible tendency on the part of exporting countries to expand their acreage even beyond that which they sowed during the period when wheat-deficient nations were importing most heavily. There is therefore as imperative a need as ever for improvement in the efficiency of Western agriculture and for aggressive sales policies, as well as for more strenuous efforts to diversify farming and to withdraw submarginal lands from cultivation.

CONSOLIDATION OF GOVERNMENT SERVICES

If, contrary to the opinion this Bank has expressed for many years, legislative union of some of the provinces is not regarded as feasible, there seems no valid objection to consolidation of certain services so as to end their duplication, particularly as between the Dominion, the Provincial and the Municipal Governments.

Our timber stands are among the most valuable of our resources, for with the complementary wood manufacturing industries they have a total annual production value of nearly 600 million dollars and furnish employment to about 250,000 people. If, therefore, as forestry experts claim, the growth increment is less than the total depletion, we are living off our forest capital, a condition which could be remedied by a system of real forest management. Unless steps are taken by governments for the replacement of timber cut and lost from other causes, we shall be faced before many years have elapsed with the disastrous consequences of our wilful neglect of this most valuable natural resource.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

We have been so concerned over the unsatisfactory earning power of the railway companies, and particularly over the recurring deficits of the Canadian National Railways, that we have overlooked the gravity of another transportation problem, that of reconditioning these systems. While both companies are models of operating efficiency, they have considerable obsolete or out-of-date equipment and the question of replacement is a pressing one. We may safely leave the problem of adequate new equipment for the Canadian Pacific Railway to the directors of that company, but the problem in respect to the Canadian National Railways is a public matter. This important public utility must be kept in efficient condition by the provision of modern equipment, and while large capital expenditures would of course be necessary for that purpose, they might be justified by the lower operating costs which could reasonably be expected to follow the use of the more economical motive power units now available, as well as by the greater financial returns which would probably result from the introduction of more rapid freight and express service and more attractive travelling conditions.

CONFIDENCE NEEDED

We in this country are among the most fortunate of all peoples. Yet our economic position is challenging as well as heartening. It is challenging because our economic freedom presents the opportunity of repairing the errors of the past and of making the next period of prosperity more general and more durable than those of former eras. With confidence, coupled with industrial enterprise and the vast national assets at our command, we can establish our economic and social life on a higher plane than has previously been enjoyed by the Canadian people.

Two Fined For Striking Waiter

As a result of a fight they started yesterday evening in a Broad Street cafe, Ted Sorenson and Harold Lewis were each fined $50 when they pleaded guilty to an assault charge before Magistrate Henry Hall in the City Police Court this morning.

The information was laid by George Karvelis, an employee of the cafe, who appeared in police court this morning with a blackened eye.

Karvelis told the court the fight resulted from an argument he had with the two accused on Saturday night, and they went back last night to settle it.

In a statement to the court Sorenson said he had protested the requirement of the cafe manager to pay a $1 deposit for chinaware when he had asked on Saturday night to have a cup of tea to take out.

False Alarms Investigated

A crank who apparently finds considerable amusement in seeing the fire-fighting forces of the city dashing through the streets vainly searching for reported fires, led engines on three wild-goose chases yesterday afternoon.

Fire department officials have enlisted the aid of several civic services in an endeavor to locate the crank whom they believe responsible for innumerable false calls they have received during the last few months.

Court Extends Prison Term

Appeal Bench Unanimous in Increasing Sentence in Manslaughter Case

The British Columbia Court of Appeal increased from three to five years the sentence imposed on Clarence Garrigan on a charge of manslaughter in one of nine judgments handed down today as its session opened here.

Garrigan, originally charged with murder following the death of his infant child from a beating inflicted while Garrigan was allegedly under the influence of liquor, was convicted on the manslaughter charge at the Kamloops assizes last year. The crown appealed sentence at the last session of the appeal court here. The unanimous judgment of the court today increased the term when the appeal was allowed.

A counter appeal by Garrigan, against conviction, heard in Vancouver, was dismissed.

TENNIS PLAYER APPEAL LOST

The court dismissed unanimously the appeal in the case of Barnes vs. Bradshaw. A claim was made on behalf of Lily Barnes, tennis player, for damages resulting from an accident in which she, the tandem rider on a motorcycle, sustained severe injuries to the foot when the machine on which she rode sideswiped with a car near Nanaimo. The appeal against the lower court's rejection of the claim was dismissed.

The appeal of Parker, against the Attorney-General of British Columbia, a case involving ownership of the site formerly occupied by the Rocky Point School, was dismissed with the Chief Justice dissenting.

The appeal in the Elgeti vs. Smith case, was dismissed with the Chief Justice in opposition.

The appeal in re Land Registry Act, in re Robert H. Baird, was dismissed with Mr. Justice Martin and Mr. Justice McQuarrie dissenting.

Mr. Justice Martin was alone in dissent as the court allowed the appeal in the case of Fraser vs. Harris and Kauffman.

The court was divided in allowing the appeal in the Brodt vs. Wearmouth case.

In Debrisay vs. Canadian Government Merchant Marine the appeal was dismissed with the Chief Justice in favor of approval.

The Piper vs. Unversagt appeal was also dismissed. Mr. Justice Martin and Mr. Justice McPhillips would have allowed it in part.

CURRENT CASES

As the court proceeded with the current list, the appeal of Joe Hall, twenty-six, Vancouver, against conviction and sentence of two years' hard labor on a conviction of obtaining $15 by false pretences, was dismissed.

Appearing in person to submit his appeal against the sentence imposed by Magistrate Edmonds in New Westminster last November, the prisoner asked for a transfer to the March sitting of the court in Vancouver in order to raise funds for counsel.

The record of the prisoner was reviewed before Norman Lister, appearing for the Crown, the respondent, told the court the hearing had previously been stood over from the Vancouver sitting.

In view of the lack of any assurance Hall would have funds for the next session the court disallowed the request and declined appeal on sentence on the prisoner's record.

At the request of A. H. J. Swenciski, the court struck from the list the Rex vs. James Campbell case.

MANSLAUGHTER APPEAL

Hearing continued on the appeal of Mrs. Jean McIntosh from conviction and sentence of six years on a manslaughter charge arising from a fatal attempt at abortion.

A. G. Duncan Crux, appearing for the appellant, outlined the history of the case.

The hearing is continuing.

A Social Credit study group was organized in Saanich Ward Seven under the auspices of the Social Credit League of British Columbia at a meeting held in Alex Hall on Monday evening. James Moyes was chosen as leader of the group, with Miss M. Tull as secretary. Meetings of the new group will be held for study purposes every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, the first meeting to take place on January 20, at the home of W. S. Tull, 12 Hampton Road.

SEES PERILOUS SITUATION NOW

Capt. H. G. Scott Tells Kiwanis and Canadian Clubs of Danger to Britain

"We are facing a position of tremendous danger—we may have to face it almost alone. We have faced such dangers before and we have come through. I suggest we shall come through again if we face it in the old way, with every section of the Empire doing its part," Capt. H. G. Scott told 50 members of the Kiwanis and Canadian clubs at a joint luncheon in the Empress Hotel today.

"I believe we may in these coming days find the British Empire once again cast for the traditional role of champion of world civilization," he added.

Capt. Scott looked to Germany as "the overwhelmingly critical feature of the present situation," believing that the Reich had abandoned its announced plans of eastward penetration for those of western conquest.

"I believe Germany is counting on Russia's reluctance to fight outside her own borders . . . on French weakness and fear . . . and on British pacifism and unpreparedness," he said.

He added: "But she may be counting wrong."

Capt. Scott quoted the words of Frederick the Great that it was impossible to be sure of the French, and that given a great leader they were capable of anything. He believed they might find in the present German threat their rallying cry and the means to bring back their lost unity.

The British Empire, he said, had always been unprepared, and in the course of history had probably lost more battles than it had won, but its defeats were always at the beginnings of its wars and its victories at the ends. "The map of the world is an answer and a warning to the enemies of Britain," he added.

RUSSIA AND GERMANY

Capt. Scott reviewed present conditions in Russia and Germany in the light of recent visits, and then discussed the international aspects of the present Spanish situation.

He found Russia to be a country which had passed through the first stages of revolution—the destructive and the fanatically theoretical phases—and was now entering the third, the return to the old state of affairs, but with certain marked advances.

With the return of something like normal political and economic systems, Rusia was becoming once again a great power in world affairs.

Germany's position was in some ways the converse of Russia's. On the surface the Reich seemed an efficient, busy and prosperous country whose people had a marked self-confidence and apparent satisfaction with their leadership. Under the surface the standard of living was steadily falling while that of Russia was rising.

He repeated the words of Winston Churchill that Germany was faced with the sad dilemma of stopping its re-armament with an intolerable increase in unemployment or continuing it with certain bankruptcy as the result, and that the answer could only be war.

SPANISH SITUATION

If it had not been for the Spanish situation he believed Germany would have followed the intention, violently announced by Hitler, of pressing through Czechoslovakia and Roumania into the Ukraine.

However, in the Spanish uprising he saw two factors which had changed this intention.

First, the rebels, by importing Moorish mercenaries, had changed the conflict from a forlorn-hope rebellion into a successful civil war, and had given Italy and Germany the idea of converting that war to their advantage by bringing it to a Fascist conclusion in return for a definite price to be paid by the new government.

Second, that the internal state of France, bordering on civil war before the Spanish conflict began, had given Germany and Italy their opportunity to realize their joint designs in the Mediterranean: Italy to regain control of Tunis, held by the French in spite of a predominantly Italian population, and to seize the Balearic Islands, and so cut the life-line of France to Africa, and Germany, by controlling Gibraltar, to paralyze both French and British communications.

He saw in the present situation a "tremendous danger . . . . the revival of the old Triple Alliance, plus Japan."

Capt. Scot was introduced by T. W. S. Parsons, second vice-president of the Canadian Club, and thanked by Walter M. Walker, president of the Kiwanis Club.

The Night School Modern Merchandising Class visited The Times engraving plant last night and were shown through the plant by S. L. Wilson, foreman. The process of engraving was explained and various samples were passed around the class for inspection. About twenty members attended. This was the first of a series of panned visits to local plants in the new year.

GREAT DRIVE FOR TOURISTS

Evergreen Playground Association to Spend $30,000 on Advertising Campaign

A programme calling for the expenditure of $33,000 for the 1937 advertising campaign was adopted by the Evergreen Playground Association at its anunual meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium at Seattle yesterday.

The six contributing members subscribed as follows: Seattle and Vancouver, $9,500 each; Portland, $8,500; Tacoma, $2,250; Victoria, $1,500 and Bellingham, $750.

G. H. Stevens, president of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau, and George I. Warren, publicity commissioner, who attended the meeting, returned here today.

Officers of the Evergreen Playground Association are: President, F. H. Adams, Vancouver, re-elected; vice-presidents, G. H. Stevens, Victoria; Dr. G. H. Worthington, Vancouver; Lyle Abrahamson, Tacoma; S. N. Harrisen, Bellingham; Troy E. Himmelman, Seattle, and John H. Lang, Portland; honorary directors, David Leeming, Victoria; Brenton S. Brown, Vancouver; Frank I. Sefrit, Bellingham, and Raymond B. Wilcox, Portland; secretary-treasurer, C. F. Johns, Seattle.

The sum of $25,000 will be expended in newspaper and magazine space in 1937. Western Agency Incorporated of Seattle, of which B. M. Hutchinson is manager, was reappointed the association's advertising agency and directed to submit two alternative newspaper advertising campaigns to the newly-appointed advertising committee composed of David Whitcomb of Seattle, chairman; Paul Seva, Tacoma; Elmer Johnson, Vancouver; Walter S. May, Portland; John Pierce, Bellingham, and George I. Warren, Victoria.

Longview and Everett, Wash., will be asked to rejoin the association.

VICTORIA'S INCREASE

Of all the units represented in the Evergreen Playground Association, Victoria showed the largest increase of 52 per cent tourist business, while Rainier National Park came next with a 32 2-5 per cent increase, or 8 per cent greater than any previous year.

Seattle estimated that it had 585,000 visitors in 1936.

United States transcontinental railroads, it was indicated, brought 50,000 people to Washington and Oregon from the east, and 30,000 from California. Oregon estimated a 20 per cent increase in tourist travel over 1935 and places an estimate of $35,000,000 on 1936 tourist expenditure. Car registration in Oregon from other states showed a gain of 39 per cent.

In actual advertising space the association spent $20,500 during the year, and 3,845 inquiries were received. A contact man worked for the association all through the summer in California and 25,000 booklets were printed and distributed.

The next meeting of the advertising committee of the Evergreen Playground Association will be held in Seattle on January 30.

Grants Change Due in April

Federal Aid to Province Remains Same Until End of Fiscal Year

The B.C. government has been assured by the Federal Government that grants in aid to the province for unemployment relief will remain unchanged until the end of the fiscal year on March 31, Premier Pattullo said this morning.

The intentions of Ottawa with respect to grants after that date have not been disclosed to the province yet, the Premier said in commenting upon the announcement in the east of Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of Labor, that a cut in federal grants was coming.

British Columbia at present gets $200,000 a month from Ottawa. Adding its own money to this amount the province pays the full cost of relief in unorganized territory and 80 per cent of the cost in municipalities.

With the reduction in relief rolls a decrease in federal assistance is not unexpected here, but the provincial government may consider using it as the basis for a new system of paying relief costs in municipalities. The present method of paying a straight 80 per cent of municipal costs regardless of the total amount might be replaced by lump sum grants per month, it is suggested. These grants would be calculated upon the relief record in each municipality.

So far, it was officially intimated, the government has not yet taken the suggestion under full consideration, and probably will not do so until it learns the new basis for the Ottawa grants.

Dr. S. Leacock Returns East

After spending fifteen days in Victoria, during which time he addressed a number of public meetings, Dr. Stephen Leacock, noted Canadian economist, left this afternoon for Vancouver.

He was accompanied by his son, Stephen Lushington Leacock Jr.

Tomorrow Dr. Leacock will address University of British Columbia students at Point Grey. This will end his speaking engagements on the coast.

"I had been asked to address meetings in Regina and Saskatoon on Social Credit, but was unable to accept owing to important engagements in the east," said Dr. Leacock at the Empress Hotel this morning.

The professor will proceed direct from Vancouver to Montreal.

PENDRAY SEES IMPROVEMENT

Tells Credit Granters That Paint Business Was Up in 1936

As a barometer of business, the paint industry had shown a decided improvement both in quantity and quality during 1936, declared J. Carl Pendray of the British American Paint Company, in a talk on "Keeping Out of the Red," before the luncheon meeting of the Credit Granters' Association in Spencer's dining-room this afternoon.

Paint was almost a luxury and luxuries were the first to feel the effects of the depression, Mr. Pendray pointed out.

"As a young man I went into the soap business with my father," he said. "My father was not an educated man in the accepted sense of the word, but he had a lot of commonsense and made a success of his business. I shall never forget the rules for success which he laid down for me."

Mr. Pendray listed these rules as follows:

1. Always live within your means.
2. There are seven years feast and seven years famine.
3. Keep out of the clutches of the bankers.

In order to prepare for the periods of depression which his father had taught him to expect, Mr. Pendray said that his company had to look a long way ahead. Two years before the stock market crash, they noticed that despite the fact there were numerous office buildings empty in Vancouver, new office buildings were being constructed.

They could see that in a short time the painters would be out of work as building ceased. So his company started a big advertising campaign to educate the homeowners to use paint. And due to this education, during the depression, they sold more paint than in the prosperity years. They also went in for kalsomine, the cheapest of decorative products, and last year sold over 1,000,000 pounds of it.

They looked around for a class of paint which was an absolute necessity and decided on marine paint. Owners of boats could not afford to allow their crafts to go more than a year without paint.

His company had taken advantage of the depression to overhaul and install machinery, to clean up the factory and to double the size of the varnish department in preparation for the "years of feast," Mr. Pendray said.

H. B. Dawson, secretary of the association, presented his annual report which showed a general improvement during 1936. The bureau had added to its staff and had filed 16,000 new reports.

Tom McPherson, president of the Credit Granters, was in the chair.

Prices Rising On Market Here

Oranges Advance 90 Cents a Case in a Week as Frost Hits Crops

Prices of California citrus fruits and vegetables are advancing sharply on the local market this week as frost has killed southern ground crops and necessitated use of smudge fires in the orchards.

Since Friday night, orchard heating has been costing growers about $1,000,000 a night, according to Associated Press dispatches. Sixteen thousand workers have been on duty and nearly 100,000,000 gallons of fuel oil has been burned.

Wholesale orange prices here are 90 cents a case higher today than they were last week. Lemon and grapefruit prices have also increased.

Some California vegetables are growing scarce, and the general advance in prices affects artichokes, broccoli, cauliflower, celery, lettuce, parsnips, green peas, sweet potatoes, spinach and brussels sprouts.

Local potatoes advanced $2 a ton on the wholesale market today and further increases in price are expected.

Seek Hearings On Trade Pacts

U.S. Farm Groups Ask Reciprocal Agreements Be Set Before Public

Associated Press

Washington, Jan. 12.—The National Grange and the National Co-operative Council have ojined in demanding a Senate vote, with "open hearings," on all reciprocal trade agreements the United States signs with other nations.

At present only President Roosevelt's signature is necessary to make such trade pacts binding.

Leaders of the two farm groups argued that "industry has out-bargained agriculture" in the trade agreements, allowing foreign farm products to enter the United States so that American industrial products could find new markets abroad.

The Farm Bureau Federation, silent on the question of Senate ratification, joined the other groups in opposing the "most-favored nation" principle used in the pacts.

Although each trade pact is an agreement between the United States and one other country, each lowering of tariffs affects many other countries. Under some previous treaties, the rate of Canada, for instance, cannot be fixed lower than that to the other nations. In other words, these countries demand the same treatment as the "most-favored nation" in that field.

U.S. Government Reorganization

Roosevelt Asks Congress to Approve Administrative Changes

Associated Press

Washington, Jan. 12. — President Roosevelt asked Congress today to "take immediate action" on a broad five-point programme of reorganization of the federal government, asserting:

"A government without good management is a house builded on sand."

He submitted a report of a special presidential committee recommending:

1. Extension of the civil service to all non-policy-determining positions, including all postmasters and departmental jobs except the highest executives; increase cabinet salaries from $15,000 to $20,000; substitute a civil service administrator and an unpaid citizen's board for the civil service commission.

2. Giving the President six "executive assistants" to relieve him of tremendous detail work.

3. Substitution of an independent auditor-general for the vacant post of comptroller-general, with the Attorney-General passing on the legality of government expenditures.

4. Strengthening and expanding of the budget bureau and the planning and personnel services to make them "effective managerial arms" for the President.

5. Changing the name of the Department of the Interior to Department of Conservation.

Japanese Hold Group For Plot

Canadian Press from Havas

Tokio, Jan. 12.—Three writers, a publisher, a clerk, a shoemaker and two laborers were among thirty-three persons under arrest today as Japanese police announced they had frustrated an alleged terrorist plot to incite a military revolt.

The revolt, it was claimed, would have been accomplished by a campaign of arson in leading cities as well as the establishment of anarchist rural communes throughout the nation.

Indictments for "violation of the peace" were said to have been prepared against those arrested who were the first to be seized of the 360 persons allegedly involved in the movement.

DID NOT KNOW GORKY

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 12 (Associated Press).—Among the answers of Purdue University students to an education department questionnaire was: "Shirley Temple is a child movie star." Ninety per cent scored that one correctly, but not a single student identified Maxim Gorky.

Belgian Minister Given Welcome

Baron Silvercruys Presents Credentials at Ottawa; Governor-General Replies to Message of Friendly Relations of Two Countries

Canadian Press

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—Friendship of Belgium and Canada and the mutuality of their interests were emphasized when Baron Robert Silvercruys, first Belgian minister to Canada, who arrived here last week-end, presented his credentials to the Governor-General yesterday. Later the new minister waited on Prime Minister King and Dr. O. D. Skelton, Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs.

In presenting his letters of credence, Baron Silvercruys made thankful reference to Canada's part in the Great War.

"A confiding and sincere friendship unites the two countries," he said in addressing Lord Tweedsmuir in French. "Close intellectual and commercial bonds have been created between them. Nobody has forgotten in Belgium Canada's glorious part in the gloomiest hours of our history. Canada's dead reposing in Belgian ground are there to remind us of our indebtedness.

"All my efforts will tend to make still more intimate existing relations between Belgium and Canada. The Belgian government, thanks to courageous and persevering efforts, can see today the results of its endeavor toward economic restoration. It is happy to strengthen and extend the business movement which has been established between nations capable of finding in our country an important outlet."

GOVERNOR REPLIES

After extending a welcome to Baron Silvercruys, the Governor-General said, speaking in French and English:

"I sincerely trust the bonds of friendship and sympathy between our countries may be further strengthened by your presence amongst us, and that you may find your life here full of happiness and interest.

"I can assure you of the wholehearted co-operation of the Canadian government in seeking, with your distinguished assistance, to further the mutual interests in Canada and Belgium."

Baron Silvercruys has had a distinguished diplomatic career. At the time of his appointment as minister to Canada he was counsellor at the Belgian embassy in London. Earlier he served as counsellor in Washington and China.

Other comment from Oregon follows:

SIX FIREMEN ARE INJURED

Two Seriously Hurt in University Building Blaze at Syracuse, N.Y.

Associated Press

Syracuse, N.Y., Jan. 12.—Six firemen were injured, two seriously, when flames swept the fourth floor and roof of Lyman Hall, one of the main buildings on the Syracuse University campus yesterday.

University officials and Public Safety Commissioner William Rapp estimated the loss at approximately $400,000, including portions of the building destroyed by fire, and the loss of "irreplaceable" museum collections.

Seriously injured and taken to hospitals were:

Fireman George C. Thorn, thirty-six, badly burned about the face, arm and hands.

Capt. Arthur W. Mulvihill, severe burns about the face and hands.

The six were trapped on the fourth floor when a cupola at the front of the building and a portion of the roof collapsed, showering them with burning timber and bricks.

The blaze was thought to have started from a spark from an elevator motor.

U.S. Passports Are Not Good in Spain

Associated Press

Washington, Jan. 12.—A move to have the proposed new United States Neutrality Act prohibit enlistment of Americans in armies engaged in hostilities has taken form coincidently with a revelation that the State Department is marking all United States passports "not valid in Spain."

R. Walton Moore, acting Secretary of State, yesterday stated the passport action had been taken last August. It does not actually prohibit Americans from going to Spain, but denies them protection of United States diplomatic and consular officers there.

MOVE AGAINST COMMUNISM

Associated Press

New York, Jan. 12.—Knights of Columbus were launched today on an international campaign against Communism in Canada and the United States.

The plan was approved by the quarterly meeting of the Knights' Supreme Board of Directors here last week-end. Martin Carmody, Supreme Knight, of Grand Rapids, Mich., told the gathering the Communist Party is operating now under the guise of a "defender of democracy" and is appealing for what is described as a "united front."

CAPITOL SHOWS M'EVOY STORY

Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen in "College Humor"

A half-dozen of the screen's outstanding comedians, aided by a cast of Hollywood's most charming young players, contrive to make of "College Holiday," which opens at the Capitol Theatre today, one of the funniest, gayest and most hilarous comedies with music to reach the screen this season.

With a madcap story from the pen of J. P. McEvoy to work upon, Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Mary Boland and Martha Raye go through their paces in one continuous howl of laughter. Marsha Hunt, Eleanore Whitney, Leif Erikson, Johnny Downs, Olympe Bradna, Louis DaPron, Ben Blue and Etienne Girardot, are in charge of the romance and gayety. Splendid music, gorgeous settings and a chorus of Filmdom's most beautiful girls round out this perfect bill of entertainment.

The music in "College Holiday" rates as tops. Especially worthy of note are "I Adore You" and "A Rhyme For Love," both of which have all the ingredients of sure-fire hits, and "Sweetheart Waltz," "So What?" and "Who's That Knocking at My Heart?" all of which are catchy, tuneful, gay and beautiful. The music was written by Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin, and Bert Lane and Ralph Freed.

DOMINION THEATRE

The first British film in which Paul Robeson has starred since "Sanders of the River" is being screened today at the Dominion Theatre.

When the story by Major Claude Wallace, probably the most famous authority in the world on Africa, and Dorothy Holtoway, was submitted to Paul Robeson and he agreed that it was an ideal vehicle for him, British Lion-Hammer embarked on the production of a picture which they realised would take months of work in two continents and would involve a record expenditure.

PLAZA THEATRE

Screen entertainment filled with mystery, drama and romance that will appeal to young and old alike was unfolded yesterday at the Plaza Theatre with the opening of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Unguarded Hour."

All the flavor that made the Ladislaus Fodor play a smashing hit is contained in the picture, which includes a cast of notables headed by Loretta Young and Franchot Tone.

FOREST SERVICE BATTLING PEST

Spruce Sawfly Has Caused Great Loss, But Is Being Combated, Says Speaker at Canadian Forest Engineers' Convention at Ottawa

Canadian Press

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—The spruce saw fly has already destroyed enough timber to keep Canadian sawmills in full operation for the next twenty years, R. D. Craig of Ottawa, chief of the economics branch, Dominion forest service, told the twenty-ninth annual convention of the Canadian Society of Forest Engineers here yesterday.

The pest has cost Canada millions of dollars and is threatening to wipe out the country's most lucrative supply of timber, he said. The first outbreak was in the Gaspe, Que., area and it has spread to the maritime provinces.

The forest services have made numerous surveys and everything possible is being done to combat the ravages of the fly, Mr. Craig said. Millions of parasites which feed on the fly have been imported from Europe and it is believed sufficient parasites have now been imported at least to prevent the fly from getting completely out of control.

With about sixty representatives from forestry organizations from coast to coast in attendance, the society is holding a two-day convention. Forests surveys, silviculture and presentation of various regional report are being discussed by the delegates.

Those presenting regional reports included E. C. Manning and G. S. Andrews, Victoria, British Columbia.

The meeting will close late Friday with election of officers.

"Great Ziegfeld" Opens Tomorrow

A complete dress rehearsal, similar to the famous Flo Ziegfeld night-before-the-premiere presentations—and they were the last word in elaborations—was accorded each musical number in "The Great Ziegfeld," opening tomorrow at the Atlas Theatre.

Not only were the participants in costume, but the set was lighted in the proper manner, the cameras (without film in the magazines) were run, Director Robert Z. Leonard put the principals through their paces, and to the outsider it appeared as if the scene were actually finished.

OAK BAY THEATRE

Straight from the day's headlines and as significant as an "extra" is "Exclusive Story," dramatic new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production teaming Franchot Tone and Madge Evans, and now being shown at the Oak Bay Theatre.

Written by Newspaperman Martin Mooney, one of the most sensational vice crusaders of the time, it is a story shaped from the year's blackest headlines, many of them written by the author himself.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

Charles Farrell and Charlotte Henry enact the leading roles in "Forbidden Heaven," now at the Columbia Theatre.

Other members of the excellent cast include Beryl Mercer, Fred Walton, Phyllis Barry, Eric Wilton, and Eric Snowden.

ATLAS THEATRE

"East Meets West," the GB picture starring George Arliss, is now at the Atlas Theatre.

Ballard Berkeley plays "Nezim," handsome, swarthy eastern prince, beturbanned and bejewelled and son to Sultan Arliss in this new story of intrigue in the jungle of Rungay.

Profit-taking With Irregular Close On Wall Street Market

Associated Press

New York, Jan. 12.—Specialties and utilities jumped profit-selling fences in today's market and many reached new recovery territory with gains of one to around three points.

But principal motors and steels were down most of the day, and other leaders failed to rally appreciably. The ticker tape was behind frequently with the volume expanding in the final hour. Transfers approximated 3,400,000 shares.

Violence in the General Motors strike, and the calling out of National Guardsmen by the Michigan Governor, tended to handicap buying forces.

Nervousness was allayed somewhat by the growing belief federal authorities would act, one way or another, to bring about an adjustment of the controversy.

Corporation and government bonds displayed lower inclinations. Commodities were mixed.

Shares conspicuous on the upside included American Water Works, International Hydro-Electric, American Woolen preferred and Sears-Roebuck. Backward were General Motors, Chrysler, U.S. Steel and Bethlehem.

Fractional Losses On Winnipeg List

Canadian Press

Winnipeg, Jan. 12.—Moderate export sales enabled the wheat market today to largely throw off the bearish effects of a lessening of political tension in Europe. Prices closed 1½ cent lower to unchanged, May at $1.28⅞, July $1.23⅛ and October at $1.12¼.

Off more than one cent in early trade, values rallied toward the last. Exports totalled 25,000 bushels.

Session-long selling prompted by indications war abroad was no longer an immediate possibility was replaced in late dealings by scattered buying.

Substantial sales of No. 1 northern wheat for movement at the opening of Great Lakes navigation highlighted cash grains trading, with spreads firm. Coarse grains prices followed the trend of wheat.

Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Stirred by renewed reports of British government plans to store, for emergency use, large quantities of wheat, Chicago wheat values rose briskly late today.

Early losses in wheat prices were more than overcome in many cases. It was generally believed Canada would be the chief source of supply in the event the reported plans were accepted.

At the close, wheat was ranging from ¾ off to ⅝ up compared with yesterday's finish, May 134⅛ to 134¼, July 116⅜ to 116½; corn ½ to 1⅛ advanced, May new 111⅜ to 111½, July new 106⅞ to 107; oats unchanged to ¼ higher, and provisions at 2 cents setback to an equal gain.

Food Costs Show Slight Increase

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—A moderate advance in food prices caused a slight rise in the general Canadian cost of living from 81.7 in November to 81.8 in December, according to a report issued recently by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

The food index, influenced by seasonal gains for butter, eggs, milk, beans and potatoes, increased from 75 to 75.3, the highest point during the year.

Toronto, Jan. 12.—Industrial listings on the Toronto exchange registered another gain today.

Nickel, Smelters, Ford A, Distillers Seagrams, International Petroleum, Loblaw A, bank issues and implements advanced narrowly.

Beauharnois and Canadian Marconi, recent strong gainers, lost ground in profit-taking. B.C. Power B and Power Corporation also eased.

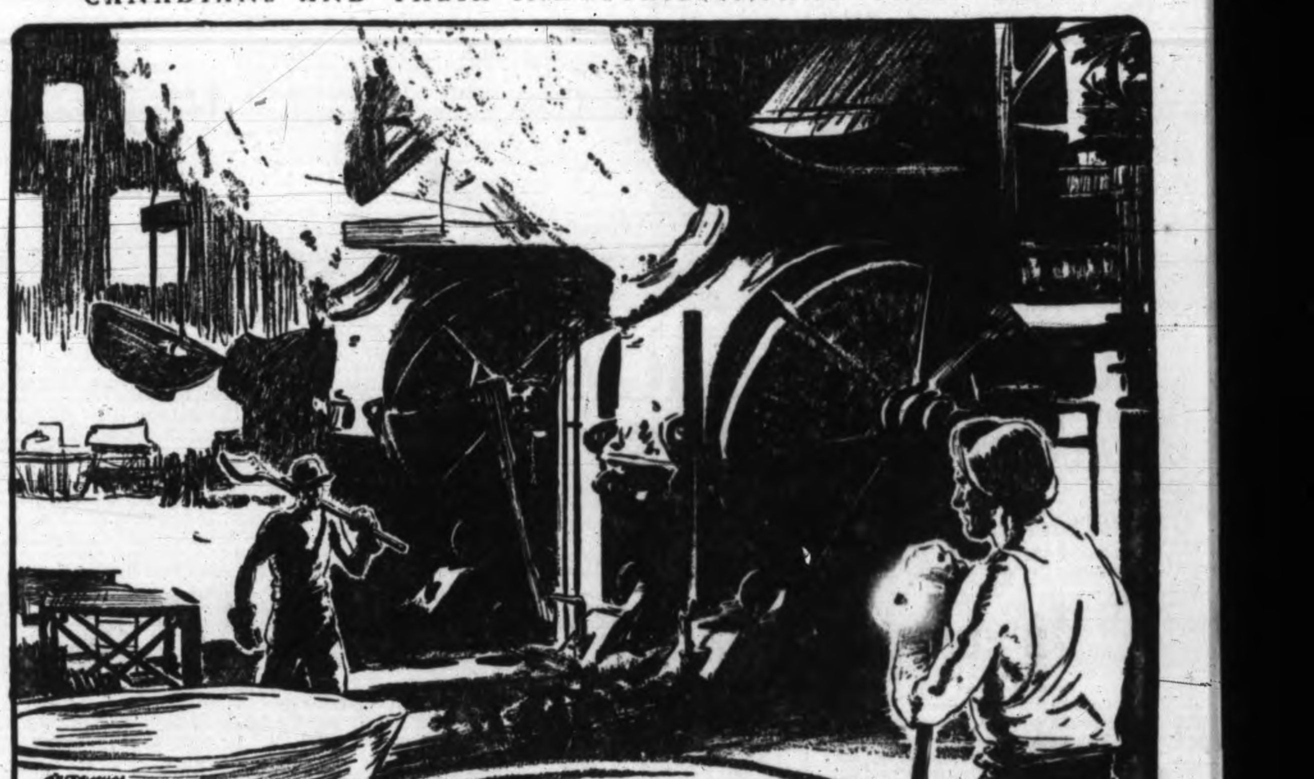
CANADIANS AND THEIR INDUSTRIES.... AND THEIR BANK



MINING AND METALLURGY

Mining in Canada, now second largest of the country's industries, gives employment to 80,000 workmen and has a production value of over $300,000,000 per annum.

As an accompaniment of this great and growing mining industry, Canada is building up a smelting and refining industry of world importance. There are now huge plants in Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, British Columbia and Manitoba. These plants produce:

Copper • Nickel • Zinc • Lead • Cobalt • Iron
Ferro-alloys • Gold • Silver • Bismuth • Radium
Cadmium • Selenium • Aluminum • Tellurium • Uranium

The plants give direct employment to 10,000 workers, and indirect employment to many thousands more; have a production value of $200,000,000 per annum; purchase coal and electricity to the value of $12,000,000; pay for equipment, supplies, freight, etc., some $40,000,000 per annum; and add some $100,000,000 to the export value of Canada's mineral products, without counting the value of the gold recovered from base metal ores.

Prominently identified with the upbuilding of the smelting and refining industry of Canada from its inception, the Bank of Montreal gives this industry financial service through every stage. Thousands of workers are depositors, sharing in the safety and facilities of the Bank with their employing companies.

The Bank's services include: Commercial accounts; foreign currency accounts; financing of shipments; loans and discounts; collections; trade and credit information; safekeeping of securities; savings accounts; money orders; travellers cheques; banking by mail; personal loans.

The Gumps

Tarzan And the Leopard Men

Kali Bwana was dragged from her hut by the small, strong warriors and brought before Rebega. The little people smacked their lips and laughed and jeered at the captive who was soon to die. The girl knew what was about to happen to her, but she was too dazed to care.

The pygmy women brought out cooking pots and lighted fires. The men danced a little, but not long, for they had been on short rations for days. Their energy was at low ebb. Now there was some dispute as to who should slaughter the captive for the feast.

Rebega was afraid. Not knowing that Bobolo was dead, he feared the wrath of the big black. Finally it was agreed that the women should kill her. Wala, remembering the blows the white girl had struck her, volunteered for the job. "Tie her hands and feet," she demanded.

The captive was thrown to the ground and bound hand and foot. Kali Bwana breathed a prayer—not for herself, but for the loved ones she had left behind, and for Jerry, the man she had come to Africa to find. Then the poor girl closed her eyes and awaited her doom.

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

DEAR MISS DIX—I have been married for three years and in all that time every holiday has been spent with my husband's family. Not once has my husband offered to take me to my home for a holiday. He says his family expect him always to be with them. If my in-laws were pleasant hosts it wouldn't be quite so hard, but the occasion is dreary beyond description. As soon as we arrive my husband settles himself down to read the paper and listen to the radio, while his mother takes me off to some other part of the house and spends her time putting me through a questionnaire about how much my dress cost, and what did I pay for by shoes, and telling me that's too much and I didn't need the dress and why didn't I wear the old one that would be plenty good. She also asks me personal questions about matters that I cannot discuss with any one, and is offended when I refuse to answer. Can you suggest some nice way for me to get out of such predicaments? I don't want to offend my in-laws, but I don't feel that I can stand the present situation much longer.

DISGUSTED.

Answer—Why don't you tell your husband plainly that you are perfectly willing to go fifty-fifty with him on the family celebrations, but that you insist on your quota and that if you go to his people for Thanksgiving, then you will expect him to go with you to your family for Christmas. There isn't any sense in your making all the sacrifices, and he will have more respect for you if you stand up for your rights.

If your in-laws are just and reasonable people they will understand your desire to be with your mother and father and sisters and brothers and old friends on some of the holidays. And if they are not just and reasonable they will make a doormat out of you unless you fight for your independence, so you had just as well make your stand at once. The longer you wait the harder it will be for you to assert yourself.

There are few things about which most families display more selfishness than in this matter of celebrating holidays, anyway. Each one wants its darling son or daughter to come and bring the wife or husband, and when the husband always drags his protesting wife to his people's or the wife shanghais the unwilling husband into going to her people's there are heart-burnings and strife. All of which could be obviated by each party playing fair and making an equal divide.

As for a remedy for a prying mother-in-law or mother, there is none. It would take a major surgical operation to remove either one's bump of curiosity. There are few mothers who do not spy into every detail of their children's lives and who do not ask them where they are going, where they have been, whom they saw, where they got their clothes, what they paid for them and why they didn't get something else. Most mothers-in-law do the same thing unless they are gifted with superhuman self-control.

The only difference between mother's questionnaire and mother's-in-law is that a girl loves her mother well enough to submit to her, while she regards mother-in-law asking the same things as an impertinence. You can't stop either one. The only advice on the subject that I can give you is that inasmuch as you have to take it, try to like it.

Just remember that if your mother-in-law has given you a good husband you owe her a debt of gratitude. Also, remember that your happiness depends to a large extent upon your ability to get along with your mother-in-law in peace and that nothing you can do will endear you to your husband so much as not fighting with his mother. So it is a part of your policy to overlook her interference as much as you can.

But I do think a man pays his wife a scurvy trick when he makes her spend the holidays with his mother and then leaves her to a long day's boredom with a woman with whom she has nothing in common, while he spends it comfortably reading and listening to the radio instead of being put through the third degree.

• • • • • • •

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a girl of sixteen with one more year of high school before I graduate. I am very much in love with a man six years older than myself. My home life is very miserable as my father is a sot. We are always glad to hear him leave and sorry for him to come back. Now the question is—shall I get married at once in order to get out of my unhappy home, or shall I wait until I finish school? What would my friends think of me if I got married so young?

UNHAPPY GIRL.

Answer—Let me urge you to go on and finish school. You will regret it as long as you live if you do not do this. You will always feel that you threw away an opportunity that you could have enjoyed and if you ever have to seek a job you will find it a serious handicap to be obliged to admit that you are not even a high-school graduate.

As to what your friends will think of you if you marry at sixteen, you need have no doubt. They will think you very foolish and very pitiful. They will think that a girl shows very little intelligence when she marries before she is old enough to know her own mind and before she has seen anything of men or the world. They know that at sixteen a girl is still emotionally a child, too young to really love, and that she can think herself in love with any man who comes along. They know that an adolescent girl's taste is always changing and that the man she is crazy about at sixteen she wouldn't even look at at twenty. They will pity you because you are missing all the pleasures of girlhood. There is nothing sadder than the sight of a young girl who should be enjoying herself tied down with a husband and babies and old before her time.

To marry in order to get away from an unhappy home is like jumping from the frying-pan into the fire. It may get you out of one set of difficulties, but it gets you into another. Husbands can be just as disagreeable as fathers and as grumpy and hard to live with. And it is a lot easier to leave your father's house than it is your husband's.

The Story of China

AMONG the very old myths of China are many which tell about dragons. It is even related that a dragon "stood near when the world was being made."

As centuries passed by, the story-tellers spoke of many different kinds of dragons. Here is a description of one kind:

"It has the head of a camel, the horns of a deer, the ears of a cow, the eyes of a rabbit, the neck of a snake, the scales of a carp, the claws of a hawk, the paws of a tiger"

Dragon in front of emperor's palace in old Peking (now Peiping)

In other words, that dragon was a little bit of a mixture!

In one case we are told of a dragon with eighty-one scales, or "nine times nine," making a lucky number. In another case a dragon is described as having 153 scales, with 117 of them having power to do good, the rest with the power of evil.

Old Chinese stories show that dragons usually were supposed to be friendly to human beings. It was only when dragons grew angry with one another, or with people on earth, that they were likely to do harm.

Dragons were said to make their homes in many places—in rivers and springs, in the rushing wind, in the clouds. If they began to fight among themselves, there came thunder and a downpour of rain. When the fighting lasted a long time, it might mean so much rain that there would come a terrible flood.

When the weather was too dry, the people used to drop pieces of iron in springs, ponds and rivers. They believed this would make the dragons rise into the air and do some good by making rain.

An old Chinese belief was that an eclipse of the sun was caused by a dragon swallowing the sun. In such an event, people would blow horns and whistles, would sound gongs and beat drums—hoping the noise would frighten the dragon and make it "cough up" the sun!

An old Chinese medicine was made from "dragon teeth." The "teeth" were really bones of prehistoric animals found on the high plateau of Mongolia and shipped down to the valleys and plains of China. The bones were ground into a powder, and the powder was mixed with oil or with rice-wine.

During the time when Manchu emperors ruled over China, a figure of a dragon was placed on the Chinese flag. Statues of dragons were carved for use in front of royal palaces and other large buildings.

The revolution which led to the Chinese republic twenty-five years ago caused a change in the flag, taking the dragon off. Many people had come to feel that the dragon stood for royal power which crushed down the common man. This is why the republic has not been friendly to the dragon idea.

Brother Andre Laid to Rest

Body of Holy Man Buried Beside Shrine on Mount Royal

By JOHN LEBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, Jan. 12. — The body of Brother Andre, the repository of apparent miraculous powers in life, was laid in the tomb today with all the solemn splendor the Roman Catholic Church accords her great in death.

Amid the sombre dignity of a pontifical high mass of requiem, the little holy man of Mount Royal was buried beside his imposing shrine atop the mount, the $4,000,000 edifice he erected to St. Joseph from the gifts of pilgrims who called him a worker of miracles.

Three thousand persons saw the ceremony, jammed into the low, vaulted crypt of the Oratory of St. Joseph. Outside, while a trickle of snow slanted down and a chill wind gusted across the mountain, an estimated 15,000 more pressed around the edifice.

All walks of life were there, in final homage to the ninety-one-year-old friar who died last Wednesday after a life of humility and pain and suffering. Mothers brought babes in arms; the infirm hobbled up the long hill on crutches or canes; some had to be helped into the church.

THRONG OF CHURCHMEN

Cardinal Villeneuve headed a great throng of churchmen, seated on a red-canopied throne within the sanctuary and directly before the plain black coffin flanked with its six candles and guarded by six of Montreal's firemen. In the front row of the congregation sat Lieut.-Governor E. L. Patenaude of Quebec, Premier Maurice Duplessis and Mayor J. Adhemar Raynault.

At the long, low altar, draped in the purple of mourning, Bishop J. E. Limoges of Mount Laurier celebrated the mass and afterwards conducted the brother's body to the tomb in the mournful ritual of the service for the dead.

NEW WARSHIP IS LAUNCHED

U.S. Destroyer Henley Christened By Descendant of War of 1812 Hero

Mare Island, Calif., January 12.—A member of a distinguished naval family of the United States today christened the 1,500-ton destroyer Henley just before it slid down the ways into the waters of San Francisco Bay.

Miss Beryl Joslin of Newport, Rhode Island, great-great-great grandniece of Capt. Robert Henley, who fought in the war of 1812, and for whom the new fighting ship is named, acted as sponsor, upon the invitation of the Secretary of the Navy.

The Henley is one of the destroyers under construction from funds appropriated by Congress for replacement of obsolete naval vessels. Work on her started in 1933.

When completed she will embody all the advance features of hull construction, engineering innovations and armament. She will carry eight officers and 150 men when commissioned during the coming summer.

Miss Joslin arrived here yesterday with her mother, widow of Lieut.-Commander R. K. Joslin, U.S.N. Lieut.-Commander K. H. Kame of the cruiser San Francisco is an uncle of the sponsor of the Henley.

Capt. Lovegrove Is Given Honor

In honor of Capt. A. V. R. Lovegrove, D.S.O., R.D., R.N.R., who retired as commander of the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Asia Saturday evening, upon her arrival from the Orient, a luncheon was held in the liner's dining salon at Vancouver yesterday.

Capt. E. Aikman, general superintendent of the Empress liners, presided at the luncheon, which was attended by the captain's fellow officers and shoreside officials of the company.

Capt. L. M. Goddard, the Asia's chief officer, presented his retiring commander with a set of matched golf clubs, a large mantel clock and a set of knives of the new coronation pattern. The shoreside forces combined to present Capt. Lovegrove with a purse of gold.

Even the Chinese members of the Asia's crew did not forget their "bossy man," and they made him a suitable presentation and personally said farewell to him.

The figures for height serve to distinguish high water from low water. Where blanks occur in the tables, the tide rises or falls continuously during three of the usual tidal periods.

The height is in feet and tenths of a foot, measured from the average level of lower low water.

Fine New Busses Arousing Much Interest In City

The top picture shows the three new modern transit-type busses which on Friday morning next will inaugurate a more frequent service on the Gorge and Lake Hill routes of the Vancouver Island Coach Lines Ltd. These all-metal coaches have double doors at front and rear and the comfortable seats and their arrangement were highly commented upon by people who inspected them at the Coach Lines depot today. Mayor McGavin and members of the City Council will be taken for a ride in the busses tomorrow. In the lower picture are members of the staff of the Coach Lines with Sergt. McNaught of the Provincial Police. Reading from left to right they are as follows: H. Pendray, dispatcher; J. Davie, J. A. Bostock, mechanical superintendent; Harold Husband, manager; Sergeant McNaught and G. C. Parrott of the clerical staff.

Days End For Great Yacht

San Pedro, Jan. 12.—The Sultana, $1,000,000 queen of yachts in 1890, lay keeled over in a muddy channel of Los Angeles harbor today, doomed as a battered, worthless wreck.

In the grip of the oozing tide, her bowsprit canted crazily, the Sultana was near the end of a story that began one proud day forty-six years ago when she was launched in a Brooklyn shipyard for the late E. H. Harriman, railroad magnate.

Nine times the richly outfitted yacht changed hands. During the Great War she was in the submarine patrol off the coast of France. Movie companies used her later, off the coast of California. In 1933, after years at anchorage, she was won in a groceryman's raffle by J. Q. Tabor of Venice, California.

Her owner had no use for her, so she rode, rotting at anchor, until a storm last week tore a hole in her stern.

Stowaways Had Rough Crossing

Associated Press

New London, Conn., Jan. 12.—The storm-battered Finnish freighter Wirta, safe in port after a hazardous Atlantic crossing, was boarded here yesterday by an immigration inspector who checked the crew and made arrangements for the return of two stowaways to Esthonia.

Buckled plates, smashed timbers and torn woodwork were mute witnesses to the power of a forty-five-foot sea which, members of the crew said, broke over the vessel during a raging Atlantic storm.
